ATLANTA PASTORS PLEAD FOR PEACE IN YULE SERMONS

Future of Humanity Lies in Christian Spirit of Friendship, Dr. Edward G. Mackay Declares.

FASCISTS' CRUEL POLICIES BLASTED

Blood-Hungry Rulers, Their Persecutions Assailed by Rev. T. S. Will.

By WALLACE MINSHULL.
A strong plea for universal peace, a peace for which Christ died on Calvary, was made by Atlanta ministers in Christmas sermons yesterday.

Pleading for a resurgence of simple living, extolling the qualities exalted at Bethlehem in the birth of Jesus, pastors exhorted their congregations to turn again to the principles of Christianity which still persist in a world torn and bleeding under the despotic hands of ruthless dictators.

Emphasizing the fact that only through "the peace of Bethlehem" can Christian society survive and work for ultimate peace, Dr. Edward G. Mackay, pastor of First Methodist church, declared the future of humanity lies in the Christian spirit of friendship that "unites all men and nations in bonds of mutual trust and esteem."

Two Kinds of Peace.
"There are two kinds of peace, the 'pax Romana' and the 'pax of Bethlehem,'" Dr. Mackay declared. "The 'pax Romana' rests on force, on the will of dictators, on military power and on regimentation in which freedom dies. The 'pax of Bethlehem' is founded on good-will, the principles enunciated in the angels' song at the first Christmas.

"The latter is the ideal for a democratic and Christian society and the only path toward ultimate peace. Force has failed to win peace as evidenced in the warlike spirit of the world today. It is imperative that the Christian church echo the angels' song until the Christian spirit of friendship unites all men and nations in bonds of mutual trust and esteem.

Dictators Assailed.
"Humanity is a family," he continued, "and must live on terms of brotherhood and justice. It is strange that Germany, the country that originated Santa Claus, and which has been regarded as a Christian nation, should be persecuting the Jews and thus denying the 'spirit of Christ.'"

The materialistic ideology of the totalitarian states was scored by the Rev. Theodore S. Will, rector of All Saints Episcopal church, in a sermon in which he emphasized the importance of the Christmas story, declaring it to be "the one thing that gives coherence and meaning to an otherwise purposeless confusion."

"God so loved the world that He gave His only-begotten Son. What a world for God to love," the Rev. Mr. Will declared. "Where in the habitable globe can we find that love today? In the bomb-dripping planes hovering over China? In the shrapnel-sprayed cities and hamlets of Spain? In the wars and rumors of wars that fill our ears? In the filthy hovels

"UNCLE JOHN" CORLEY.

John Corley, Confederate, Dies at 99

East Point's 'Grand Old Man' Had Been Ill for Long Time.

"Uncle John" Corley, known as the "grand old man" of East Point and one of its most prominent residents, died at his home, 406 West Washington street, East Point, yesterday afternoon. He was 99 years old last April 17.

"Uncle John" had been in failing health for some time and had been confined to his bed for several months. He was born on a farm at Talbotton, from which, at the age of 16, he joined the Confederate army. One of his most prized possessions was the Confederate Cross of Honor, which he wore every day.

His late wife was the former Ruth Carson, of East Point. Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Lottie Davis, with whom he made his home; five sons, A. J. Corley, Will Corley, Olin Corley and Frank Corley, all of Chattanooga, and B. W. Corley, of Miami; 14 grandchildren; 18 great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the residence, the Rev. G. F. Venable and the Rev. R. L. Armour officiating. Burial will be in Hillcrest cemetery under the direction of Howard L. Carmichael.

Mr. Corley had been a reader of The Constitution for the last 71 years. On the occasion of the celebration of his ninety-ninth birthday last April, "Uncle John" declared he read the paper every morning with his breakfast.

"Reading the paper is my favorite indoor sport," he declared on that occasion. "While I may not be able to get out and run around like other boys, still I know what is going on. I like red-hot political news and I like the country's policies to be progressive."

125 Killed, 300 Hurt In Train Collision

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Dec. 25.—(UP)—One hundred twenty-five persons were reported killed and 300 were injured today when a passenger train collided with a freight train between Galatz and Chisinau, in Bessarabia.

The station master at Galatz was reported to have been arrested in connection with the accident.

Police officials confirmed the accident, but they said they did not have the exact number of casualties because telephone communication to Galatz had been disrupted by snowstorms and ice.

FIVE ARE KILLED IN AUTO MISHAPS DURING WEEK END

John H. Forsyth Dies of Injuries Received in Downtown Accident, Raising 1938 Toll to 56.

TUCKER YOUTH, 18, SAVANNAH DEAD

Two Men Fatally Hurt By Hit-Run Driver on Ogeechee Highway.

Five persons were killed in a series of holiday traffic accidents over the holiday week end described by state highway patrol officers as "unusually quiet."

John H. Forsyth, 44, of 453 Ninth street, N. W., was fatally injured in a downtown accident here Saturday night. It was the city's 56th traffic death of the year.

Contrasting with Saturday's record of seven persons injured in 25 accidents, yesterday showed only four accidents and one injury to make it one of the quietest Christmas days on record.

Forsyth died of injuries received when he was struck by a car driven by W. G. Griffin, 52, of 522 Washington street, as he was attempting to cross Luckie street at Alexander.

Witnesses said Griffin was driving about 20 miles an hour and turned in an effort to avoid the accident. He was charged with reckless driving. Forsyth was pronounced dead on arrival at Grady hospital.

Millard Hollis, 14, of 1165 Orme-wood drive, was taken to Grady hospital in an unconscious condition shortly after 5 o'clock when he was struck and knocked from his bicycle in front of 961 Woodland avenue, S. E. The extent of his injuries was undetermined.

H. J. Crossley, of 1026 Woodland avenue, S. E., driver of the machine and a member of the Atlanta fire department, was arrested by Radio Patrolmen J. B. Bishop Jr. and Alonzo Walker and charged with drunken driving and accident. He will be arraigned in recorder's court tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Other Victims.

Others injured in minor accidents were Howard C. McFarland, 37, of 573 Forrest road; W. L. Gross, of 22 West Pace's Ferry road; J. D. Morgan, of Scottdale; J. C. Dabney, of Smyrna; Henry Webb Jr., of 26 1-2 Boulevard; George Jackson, of 266 Frasier street, and G. W. Bussey, of 308 White street.

Chatham County Police Chief W. F. Chapman, said two unidentified men were killed by a hit-run driver early yesterday while walking south on the Ogeechee road about three and a half miles from Savannah.

Chapman said the men were found about 60 feet apart by a motorist who came along shortly afterwards and reported it to police at 2 a. m.

The men were estimated to be about 32 and 48 years of age. No identifications were found on the bodies except the name Owens, a laundry mark, in the sweater worn by one of the men.

The bodies were brought to a local mortuary in Savannah. Others killed were Arthur Etheridge, 18, of Tucker, and Miss Christine Winter, of Savannah.

Etheridge died of injuries received when his car sideswiped another machine and crashed into a telephone pole on the Lawrenceville highway near Tucker about 9:30 o'clock Saturday night.

Car Out of Control.
DeKalb county police reports said his car apparently got out of control after hitting the other, which did not stop. Officers were unable to learn the identity of the driver of the second car. Etheridge is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed E. Etheridge, four brothers and six sisters. Miss Winter, a native of Swe-

FBI AGENT PROBES JOHNSON MYSTERY

Persistent grilling yesterday failed to shake the story of Jack King, 22, homeless wanderer, held by Longview (Texas) police, to explain his possession of the automobile of Richard P. Johnson, missing stereotypist of The Atlanta Journal.

King told and retold his story of wandering about the country with Johnson, and of finally becoming separated in Waco. The questioning was done by an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and at its conclusion, Chief of Police Albert Adams told The Constitution last night his statement had held together at all points.

To Hold Youth.

Nevertheless, Chief Adams said, a federal charge of some nature is planned so that the youth may be held while search continues for Johnson.

King said he was "picked up" by Johnson in Mobile last Sunday, and that they drove to the southwest, touching Orange, Houston and Austin, Texas, where a third man named Smith, a World War veteran, was added to the party.

"We were all broke and when we got to Waco, Mr. Johnson said he was going to 'hunt up something to eat.' He and Smith went off together. I waited for them 18 hours and finally saw Smith, who told me he didn't know what had become of Mr. Johnson.

No Amnesia Victim.
"I called both the sheriff's office and the police station in Waco trying to get some line on him. Then, when I didn't know what else to do, I took Smith up on his proposition to buy the gasoline for driving to Dallas. When we got to Dallas, Smith disappeared and left me with the car."

King was driving the machine alone through Longview, 130 miles east of Dallas, when policemen recognized the license number, which had been broadcast in the search for Johnson, and took him in custody.

Chief Adams told The Constitution that earlier reports of King's suffering from amnesia were inaccurate and that he had talked freely from the moment of his arrest. Adams said he was inclined to accept King's story out-

'Gone With the Wind' Premiere Is Set for September Here

Clark Gable and Paulette Goddard Will Visit City in Costumes of Rhett and Scarlett for Gala World's First Showing of Epic.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS,
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—The world's premier showing of "Gone With the Wind," Margaret Mitchell's stirring saga of the days of the War Between the States, will be held in an Atlanta theater next September. This has been definitely determined. All the glamour and fanfare of a Hollywood first night will accompany the showing of the long-awaited film.

Stars of the famous production wearing the costumes of the play will come to the city which provides much of the setting for the novel.

Clark Gable, cast as Rhett Butler, will be there. In his shadow will walk Paulette Goddard, as the vivacious, self-possessed but scheming Scarlett of the greenish-cast eyes. With them will be Margaret Sullivan or Janet Gaynor as the meek and melancholy Melaine, together with Lenore Ulric as the spicy Bell Watling.

Are Already Cast.

Despite any evasiveness or deception which may have been employed by the producers of the film in their zeal for advance publicity, it is now pretty generally conceded in inside cinema circles that these movie stars already have been cast for the title roles.

Gable, a natural for the role of Rhett, as many critics agree, has been picked for the part for months. And despite all the ballyhoo about looking for an unknown amateur southern girl to take the part of Scarlett, the choice up to now has rested between Paulette Goddard and Carole Lombard, the blue-eyed ash-blond and current romance of Gable.

Having more of the hussified aspects of the intriguing Scarlett than her rival, Paulette has held the inside track from the start. The chief uncertainty lay in her inexperience with sound movies. Until she was signed up some six months ago by distributors of the picture she had never appeared in talkies. Two of her recent sound pictures, released in rapid succession, seem to have settled the matter in her favor.

Although producers have not officially announced the release date of the picture, sources close to the executive staff of David Selznick, who is filming the Mitchell masterpiece, said it would be "sometime in the early fall, most

INSURGENTS CLAIM TWO DEEP DRIVES

Half Million Soldiers Concentrated for Large Offensive of War.

HENDAYE, France (At the Spanish Frontier), Dec. 25.—(AP)—Spanish Insurgents reported today their northern armies had driven two spearheads deep into government territory in an offensive aimed at Barcelona.

In the third day of a major battle in which there was no Christmas respite, Generalissimo Franco's field headquarters said a combined land and air attack had broken defense lines guarding strategic river fortifications in two separated sectors.

Advance Pressed.

Insurgents said the offensive was gaining momentum with all the northern columns pressing their advance.

The weather benefitted the campaign which began Friday in blizzards and sub-zero cold. The snow had ceased and the temperature had risen.

Both sides pinned great importance on Franco's long-awaited drive, the success or failure of which they agreed might be decisive in the war. Arrayed on the snow-whitened front were an estimated half a million men in both armies, one of the largest concentrations for a single battle in the more than 29 months of strife.

The broader advance was reported from the region between the wide southerly bend of the Ebro river and the junction of the Lerida, Tarragona and Huesca province borders.

30-Mile Front.

The insurgent attack, with warplanes, tanks, artillery and troops, swept a front more than 30 miles long. Franco's commanders said they had taken a chain of towns along the whole length of the sector from Almatret in the south to Sarroca in the north.

In the mountainous area south of Trempt, they said, Moroccan troops forced the defenders back over icy trails and captured four villages east of the Noguera Pallaresa river.

Government advisers acknowledged heavy fighting in the Ebro sector but denied the scope of the Insurgents' reported gains. They did not mention operations in the Trempt area.

Barcelona communiques said Italian troops realized only several advantages which cost them

F. D. R. EXPECTED TO STRESS ARMS IN HIS MESSAGE

Detailed Outline of Agricultural Situation Also Forecast; First Draft Is Nearing Completion.

THOROUGH PROBE OF WPA INDICATED

Dies Will Give Report on His Un-American Investigation on January 2.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Relief, rearmament and farm legislation were designated by congressional leaders today for early consideration in the session beginning January 3.

Many legislators were out of Washington for the holidays, and there will not be much actual bill drafting until after the new congress organizes and hears President Roosevelt's annual message.

Mr. Roosevelt was reported nearing completion of the first draft of the message, which he will deliver in person January 4. Informed persons said a major portion of his address would be devoted to foreign affairs and the projected increase in armament. A detailed outline of the farm situation is expected.

Estimate Army Needs.

The army's annual appropriations request went to the house Friday, and an appropriations subcommittee arranged to start hearings on it before January 15. The secret estimates presumably included funds for an expansion of the army air force.

Some house authorities have predicted the army will need at least $600,000,000 or $650,000,000 for the next fiscal year, or about $200,000,000 more than the present appropriation.

Mr. Roosevelt is not expected to ask for any fundamental change in the existing farm act, although the agriculture department may agree to some alterations to meet objections raised by farmers.

Farm Program.

Among numerous new farm programs already suggested is one by Representative Massingale, Democrat, Oklahoma, which would guarantee farmers the cost of production. Secretary Wallace and some legislators also have urged the imposition of taxes on the processing of certain farm products to provide additional money for benefit payments to producers.

The President will send congress a special message on the relief question shortly after the session begins. He will explain that the existing appropriation is almost exhausted, and will request additional funds for the remainder of this fiscal year, which ends June 30.

Last session, congress voted $1,425,000,000 for relief spending from July 1 through February 28. WPA officials have said this money will be gone by February 7.

House appropriations authorities said that the relief request would be given right-of-way over other spending measures, and senators

ATLANTA READERS PREFERRED BOOKS ON SOUTH IN 1938

Caldwell's "Tobacco Road" Led in Fiction; "Gone With the Wind" Still Included in First 10.

The south was the main course on Atlanta's reading menu for 1938.

Prepared by Specialists Erskine Caldwell and Jonathan Daniels, and served by the Carnegie Library, "Tobacco Road" and "A Southerner Discovers the South" led the fiction and non-fiction lists respectively during the closing year, according to Librarian Jessie Hopkins.

Listed among the ten fiction titles in greatest demand during 1938 were four others which had a southern setting: Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind," which was included for the third consecutive year, and Harry Lee's "Fox in the Cloak," which had an Atlanta scene, also ranked high.

Two Other Novels. The two other novels of the south were "Deep Summer," by Gwen Bristow, a story of revolutionary Louisiana, and Marjorie Rawlings' "The Yearling," the artistic account of a Florida boy and his animals.

Carnegie officials suggest that the recent controversy over censorship of the play here contributed to a renewed demand for "Tobacco Road," although it has been consistently popular since its release in 1932.

The old year on the whole showed a decided increase in non-fiction circulation, said Miss Hopkins. During the month of March, the library set an all-time record with 17,000 non-fiction titles circulated.

In November reader interest was equally divided and four times during the year non-fiction demands reached 16,000. Authorities maintain that increase in appeal of history, politics, philosophy, biography, and economics can not be accredited to a new awakened interest in these fields on the part of readers but to the fact that the style and general content of non-fiction has been made more attractive.

The recent international crises may have prompted the reading of Hitler's "My Battle," and John Gunther's "Inside Europe," both of which were among the ten most popular non-fiction titles.

Non-Fiction. Other leading non-fiction books were "Dry Guillotine," by Giles Belbenoit; "Madame Curie," by Eve Curie; "With Malice Toward Some," by Margaret Halsey;

Atlantans Preferred These 2 Books in 1938

Here they are, folks, Atlanta's choices in fiction and non-fiction reading matter for 1938. Miss Jeanne Crowell, of the Carnegie Library staff, is shown holding Erskine Caldwell's "Tobacco Road," and Jonathan Daniels' "A Southerner Discovers the South."

"Horse and Buggy Doctor," by Arthur Hertzler; "Think and Grow Rich," by Napoleon Hill; "Listen, the Wind," by Anne Morrow Lindbergh; and "Importance of Living," by Lin Yutang. Besides the four southern novels already mentioned, leading fiction titles of the year included "The Citadel," by A. J. Cronin; "Rebecca," by Daphne du Maurier; "Drums Along the Mohawk," by Walter Edmonds; "All This and Heaven, Too," by Rachel Field; and "Northwest Passage," by Kenneth Roberts.

The closing year was a mottling stage for the Carnegie library. For the first time since the depression years there has been an increase in every department.

Atlanta's reading public has bounced back to normal.

AMNESIA VICTIM REPORTED BETTER

Walter B. Ray, Who Disappeared From Griffin, Observed Christmas at Home.

ROME, Ga., Dec. 25.—Today was the strangest Christmas ever experienced by Walter B. Ray. Ray, a 32-year-old Griffin upholsterer, is slowly recovering at the Lindale home of his brother, the Rev. Fred H. Ray, from a mysteriously received skull fracture which produced amnesia.

Although he instinctively knows the spirit of the day, Ray cannot remember his last Christmas, or previous yuletides, so, in so far as his present self is concerned, today was his first. He spent it in reunion with his wife, the family of his Methodist minister-brother, and another brother, James Lloyd Ray. A sister, Mrs. J. R. Terrell, of Manchester, was unable to be with him, due to illness in her family.

Ray, missing from his home in Griffin early this month, turned up in Carrollton, his memory a blank. Identified by a crossfire of descriptions, he was claimed by relatives and brought to a Rome hospital, where it was discovered he had received a severe skull fracture. A blood clot, pressing against the brain, produced amnesia. Authorities expressed a belief he had been beaten and robbed at or near Griffin, and dumped from an automobile near Carrollton.

Relatives today reported his condition is gradually improving, but that though he laughs and jokes with relatives, he still cannot remember much of his past life.

Most surprising separation: The Richard Arlens. Least ditto ditto: Crawford and Tone. Most popular star: Ferdinand the Bull.

Most persistent romance: Lombard and Cable. Most notable comeback: John Barrymore's. (And he's beating his salary back to where it once was.)

Most commendable contribution: Warner's patriotic shorts. Biggest salary: Norma Shearer's. (If that attorney is correct, she's got millions and some.)

Gottiest dance: The Park Avenue Gimp.

Unluckiest man: Harmon O. Nelson. (Divorced from Bette Davis.)

Most successful diet: Jack Oakie's. (He dropped high onto 60 pounds.)

Oddest job: That of the prop man who wrote 40 epitaphs for a movie cemetery. Most hissed: Basil Rathbone. Most sought bachelor who fell:

Georgia Artists To Be Presented In Exhibition Opening Tomorrow

High Museum Will Display Work Depicting Scenes in All Sections of the State; Exhibit Will Continue Until January 6.

By ST. JOHN BARNWELL. Georgia as Georgia artists see it is the theme carried throughout the 41 select pieces of oil, water color and sculpture in the exhibition opening tomorrow at the High Museum of Art. Remaining until January 6, it is acclaimed the best of the traveling exhibits sent out by the Association of Georgia Artists for the past 10 years.

So varied and vivid are the scenes pictured that the viewer may take a tour throughout the state by visiting the auditorium gallery. "Stevedores Crossing the Savannah," by Mark Sheridan, sweeps from the coast; "Languid Lagoon" takes you on to Macon where Alan M. MacDonell paints; an intriguing road between green trees by Horace T. Day leads to Augusta; an old mill in Columbus is pictured by Mary F. Passalacqua W. E. Snowden points to Elberton; a picture by John Peacock includes Cochran; then travel on to magnolias beside a pond by Mrs. Sydney W. Buman and from there take a pictured road near Athens by Sally A. Goodwyn.

Progressive in nature, the entire show denotes advancement in Georgia art. The five pictures bearing stars are those awarded prizes, and are "Hibernian Street Scene," where blue is richly used by Christopher Murphy Jr., Savannah; "Ella Rose Maria," by Ellen Thomas, is a portrait of a little pickaninnie in a red dress resented by excellent work. Elizabeth Paxton Oliver, well known for her fine negro portraits, shows her talents in a beach scene, "Sunny," by Caroline H. Russell, and "Joe Pye Weed," by Joseph Lee Edwards, are fine pieces. "Puddleville," by Ernest DeVane, won such admiration at Museum Art school show last season that its reappearance denotes statewide recognition.

A splendid painting, "Julia in Costume," is seen from the brush of Marjorie Conant Bush-Brown. A clear portrait of a little boy is by Beatrice J. Stubbs, and Ben E. Shute excellently painted in well-chosen colors a boy strumming a guitar. The well-molded head of "Young Stribling," the late famed prize-fight king, is by Marshall Daugherty, and represents sculpture. A flower composition by Annie May Holliday is decorative, as is "Thistles," by Mary Hope Cabanis, and "My Lady's Favorite Flower," by Ann F. Cargill. Typical of the noted Lamar Dodd technique is a water color by him. Contradictory to its title, "Rainy Day" is a gay piece by Jean Nevitt Flanigen.

Others exhibiting include: Eleanor N. Goldberg and Henry Lee McFee, of Savannah; Ellen Thomas, Elizabeth F. Wright and Clara Davis, of Augusta; Mrs. J. Dupont Kirven and Helen Johnson, of Columbus; Alan M. MacDonell, of Macon; Mary Paul Glenn and Kate M. Cobb, of Athens, and Elizabeth M. Lobinger and Mrs. Paul Hogan.

EAST POINT HEADS WILL TAKE OFFICE TUESDAY, JAN. 3

Mayor Reviews Excellent 1938 Record, Pledges He Will Continue His Fight for Lower Taxes.

City officials of East Point, a majority of whom were re-elected a few weeks ago, will be inducted into office at a meeting Tuesday, January 3, when the new fiscal year of the municipality begins.

Headed by Mayor J. R. Parham, who was returned by a large majority, those taking office will be E. L. Cole, city clerk; George H. Sparks, superintendent of the light and water department; Ezra E. Phillips, city attorney; C. J. Hansen, chief of the fire department; William Tyler, chief of police, and G. W. Thomason, city physician.

New Councilmen.

Two new councilmen also will take office. They are Robert Carmichael, who succeeds D. A. McDuffie, and Simpson Kidd, succeeding E. G. Laney. Other members of the council are Mayor Parham, E. A. Sims, E. J. Bass, J. Paul Edson and J. H. Blair.

Reviewing the year just closed, Mayor Parham declared the municipality was in excellent shape financially, having a balance of approximately $101,106 in the treasury. Of this amount $76,595.80 is in the interest and sinking fund; $6,655, metropolitan sewer fund; $7,155.58, special paving fund; $5,700, special general fund, and $5,000 in the special reserve fund.

Despite this balance, the mayor pointed out, East Point had reduced its water and light rates approximately 10 per cent during the year, had collected no street taxes and met all current bills, paying more than $20,000 to Fulton county for special services as well as $3,500 for charity relief.

Would Cut Taxes.

Regarding his policy for the future, Mayor Parham declared he would continue to advocate reduc-

Revised Tobacco Marketing Plan Weighed by Southern Congressmen

Lawmakers Follow Up 'I-Told-You-So' Reaction to Referendum Failure With Consideration of Substitute Program on Quotas.

By BEN GRANT.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Plans to establish a substitute tobacco program—to be modeled, perhaps, after the control system which now applies to cotton—received attention on Capitol Hill this week.

Farmer referenda so far have given a score of four to one against marketing quotas. Cotton producers alone have consented to government control in 1939—hence the demand to take a lesson from the farm act's cotton provisions.

On December 10, farmers rejected 1939 quotas on rice and flue-cured tobacco. A week later, marketing control over burley and dark type tobacco was defeated.

Some southern congressmen said tobacco farmers did not object to the quota system, as such, but were dissatisfied with the 1938 method of determining the individual shares.

Cotton growers are permitted to sell all they produce on their allotted acreage. Tobacco farmers, on the other hand, have been under a system of federal control over both acreage and production.

Many growers in the tobacco belt, therefore, complained they were not free to sell their full production without penalty taxes, even though they complied with the acreage requirements.

Defeat of the tobacco system brought "I-told-you-so" comments from legislators who tried in vain during the last session to eliminate poundage-allotment provisions of the farm act. Whether the 1939 quotas had been approved or rejected, the issue was sure to come up again in the 76th congress.

Congressmen considered it unlikely the tobacco system could be changed in time to make the amendments operative in 1939. Acreage quotas, even with poundage restrictions eliminated, could be applied only after favorable farmer votes in referenda authorized by congress. Special elections would be necessary.

Southern congressional offices were being opened last week preparatory to the opening of the January session, although most members chose to remain in their home towns until after Christmas.

Senators from Georgia, Florida, Mississippi and Louisiana kept their office building quarters open throughout the congressional recess period, and spent part of their own time in the capital. Alabama senators closed their Washington offices immediately after the 75th congress adjourned last June.

The Alabama Bankheads—Speaker William B. and Senator John H.—will not have their usual Christmas turkey together.

The speaker arrived last Wednesday to prepare for the new congress. The senator will spend the holiday week end at his Jasper, Ala., home.

GIRL HURT IN CRASH.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 25.—(AP)—Miss Marian Dugger, 15, of Waycross, Ga., was injured here today when the automobile in which she was riding collided with another occupied by several negroes. Her mother, Mrs. A. B. Dugger, and S. E. Evertt, both of Waycross, escaped injury. One negro girl was slightly hurt.

EMORY JOURNALISM TEACHERS GO WEST

Will Attend Profession's Annual Convention in Topeka, Kan.

Four members of the Emory University department of journalism will leave today for Topeka, Kan., to attend the annual convention of the American Association of Teachers of Journalism.

The delegates will be Professor Raymond B. Nixon, head of the department; Dowling Leatherwood, instructor in journalism; James C. Seymour, field manager of the Georgia Press Association, and Warren S. Duffee, assistant in the department.

Professor Nixon is a member of a committee to consider consolidation of the American Association of Teachers of Journalism and the American Association of Schools and Departments of Journalism. He also will lead a discussion on the "five-year plan of education for journalism and graduate standards."

was mystified by Johnson's disappearance.

King said he had but one relative, a brother, who was roaming South America in much the same fashion as he was traveling in this country. In the event of a federal charge, King would be taken to Dallas while the hunt for Johnson is pushed.

The steno typist disappeared December 16, after taking his automobile from a parking lot at Spring and Cain streets.

'GONE WITH WIND' PREMIERE FOR CITY

probably September. Only technical difficulties can force a delay beyond that time, it was said.

Already some of the biggest scenes have been shot. Tara and many of the other outdoor settings have been reconstructed. Sound equipment has been recorded the tread of marching soldiers on the road north of Jonesboro. The burning of Atlanta, most dramatic of all in scenic effect, also has been filmed.

Atlanta, quite naturally, was selected as the city for the world's premier performance, both because of the residence there of the author and the locale of the novel. Everything points to a gala first night.

Just Smart Publicity.

Most of the ballyhoo about looking for an unknown southern girl has been a stunt. It has been nothing more than a smart piece of publicity passed off on dozens of cities and communities where possible finds were invited—and in many cases proclaimed.

The latest example of such promotion activities had a Washington locale only a few days ago. Dorothy Nickerson, one of the loveliest of the current crop of Washington socialite adorables, received a letter from the Selznick organization inviting her to come to New York for a screen test as a potential Scarlett. There was the usual fanfare of pictures and stories in the local papers about it. All of her friends waxed enthusiastic over her prospects and fitness for portraying the stately attributes of the mythical Scarlett. It was remarked about her, moreover, that with all her innate gaiety and natural vivaciousness there still lurked within her smile a fitful strain of that melancholy which (as Poe said—or was it Lord Byron?) is ever inseparable from the sublime in feminine beauty—and which, incidentally, forms an important part of the emotional mask necessary to the proper dramatization of Scarlett's more tragic moments.

And So—A Screen Test.

So Dorothy went to New York for a screen test for the much-coveted role of Scarlett, just as others had done before her. She came back with no illusions about the matter. "It was all very interesting," she said, "but it is just a racket—all of the main roles have been filled."

That has been the suspicion of many persons from the beginning—at least on the build-up side of things. For one thing, it would have been extremely difficult to have taken a new girl unschooled in stage dramas and trained her properly for the part in time. More particularly is this true in the light of information that the producers have decided to follow the book rather faithfully. Often in the dramatization of a novel certain of its more tragic aspects are eliminated or toned down out of deference to public dislike of sad endings. The fact that Scarlett is to be portrayed with all of her sorrows calls for a high quality of dramatic acting, and therefore a finished actress.

Meantime, the conflict of individual ideas as to who should be selected for the Scarlett role continues unabated in Atlanta. It never ceases to find a place in conversation turning on the cinema. Carter Barron, former Georgia Tech football star who is now the manager for the largest chain of theater houses in Washington and consequently keenly alive to developments in the "Gone With the Wind" production, is an ardent partisan of Joan Crawford for the main part, but has no feeling that she will be chosen. He, too, understands from semi-official sources that the date for the festive Atlanta premiere of the showing will be set for September—and, like many others, plans to be there.

W. H. LYNCH'S MARK 50TH ANNIVERSARY

Peal of 'Golden' Wedding Bells Mingle With Those of Yule.

The wedding march replaced the customary jingle bells yesterday when the Lynch family gathered for their Christmas dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Lynch at 1171 Indale place, S. W.

And it was all because Mother and Father Lynch celebrated their golden wedding anniversary amid the festive and colorful holiday setting as has been their custom for 50 years. They are Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Lynch, of 1161 Indale place, S. W.

At Sweet Sixteen.

The bride of a half century ago was Ola Whitmire, and when she was a young miss of 16 she married her 24-year-old "beau" at the home of her parents in Floyd county. On that day the visit of Santa Claus faded into oblivion because "Miss Ola" was getting married and all the friends and relatives came from miles around to the ceremony.

Since then the wedding bells of their added anniversaries have rung louder than the usual Christmas bells, and the day has become more of a wedding celebration for the family than the occasion of a visit from Santa.

Santa always comes, however, and yesterday the beloved couple had their share of gifts on the tree. Mr. Lynch had as much fun as his 9-month-old great-grandson, Clarence Lee Thompson, when he found his presents, while Mrs. Lynch discovered again that little girls of one year old, like her great-granddaughter, Betty Ann Lynch, can receive as many pretty things as the grown-ups in the family.

Enjoy Gardening.

Mr. and Mrs. Lynch are very active for their 74 and 66 years, and enjoy reading and gardening. The latter pastime demands a great part of Mrs. Lynch's time.

They have eight children, W. R. and S. M. Lynch, of Atlanta; G. R. Lynch, of Kilduff, Conn.; A. D. Lynch, of Gainesville; J. E. Lynch, of Dalton; C. C. Lynch, of Rome; Mrs. W. W. Barton, of Atlanta, and Mrs. C. M. Raiford, of Asheville, N. C. They have 15 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Both Christmas and Golden Wedding Year

Christmas Day had double significance to Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Lynch, of 1161 Indale place, who celebrated their golden wedding anniversary yesterday at the home of their son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Lynch, at 1171 Indale place, S. W.

THREE MEN FREED IN MASS MURDER

Fingerprints Absolve Them of Savannah Slaying.

MACON, Ga., Dec. 25.—(AP)—Police released last night three men they had held for questioning in connection with the mass murder of five persons at Savannah Tuesday.

Officers said fingerprint reports and other investigation convinced them the three had "absolutely nothing to do with the case."

Police Chief Ben T. Watkins had ordered the men held while circumstances that might have linked them in the case were checked. He said two of the men were from Moultrie, Ga., the third from Jacksonville, Fla.

Meanwhile, at Savannah, funeral services were arranged for four of the victims, J. S. Tillman, his wife and two small daughters. They were clubbed to death in their beds. Funeral for Thomas Chester, who was shot, awaited arrival of relatives.

DAWSONVILLE COUPLE WED FOR FIFTY YEARS

DAWSONVILLE, Ga., Dec. 25.—Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Redd celebrate their golden wedding anniversary at their home here tomorrow. For the past 18 years they have lived in Dawsonville and during that time Mr. Redd has served as county ordinary four years, commissioner of roads and revenues eight years and a justice of the peace for 20 years.

Mr. Redd is a native of Forsyth county and his wife was born in Pickens county, South Carolina, a daughter of the late William B. Burdine, and Lucinda Putman. Mr. Burdine moved to Dawson county in 1870, locating on a farm on the Etowah river in Yellow Creek district.

DIVIDEND DECLARED.

ROSSVILLE, Ga., Dec. 25.—Directors of the Rossville Federal Savings and Loan Association have voted a four per cent dividend on all classes of shares.

JONATHAN DANIELS WILL SPEAK HERE

'The South as I See It,' Will Be Subject of Talk at Emory on 6th.

Jonathan Daniels, author of the best seller, "A Southerner Discovers the South," will speak at Emory University January 6, as the fourth visitor on the annual program of the Emory Student Lecture Association.

Mr. Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, is a son of Josephus Daniels, former secretary of the navy and now ambassador to Mexico. He will talk on some phase of "The South as I See It."

The program will begin at 8:15 o'clock in Glenn Memorial auditorium, according to Dr. Ross H. McLean, faculty adviser of the lecture group.

Preceding his talk, Mr. Daniels will be honor guest at a formal dinner given by the Emory Press Club in the university dining hall.

Mr. Daniels' book, described by critics as the fairest picture yet to be painted of the present-day south, won favor with readers the nation over after its publication during the past summer. For it and his outstanding editorial work in Raleigh, he was recently presented the Mayflower prize for 1938, given annually to the North Carolina resident who has done the most outstanding piece of public work during the year.

'Decay in Religion' Denied by Rev. T. S. Will, of All Saints'; Some Agree With Physicist.

By LUKE GREENE.

One Atlanta minister took issue yesterday with Dr. Robert A. Millikan, California Institute of Technology physicist, who was quoted in news dispatches as saying the "decay in religion" in the United States was a hopeful sign.

The Rev. Theodore S. Will, rector of All Saints' Episcopal church, termed the statement "reckless" and said it would undermine religious morale.

Three other ministers who expressed opinions said they would not attack the Nobel prize winner, explaining they thought they knew what he was talking about.

Outworn Creeds.

Dr. Millikan was quoted as saying "the decay of religion in the United States and the loss of faith of modern youth" means the elimination of "old-time superstitions and outworn creeds."

Pointing to the growing church membership in the nation, he added:

"All this I interpret to mean that, in America at least, we are sloughing off the external trappings, the impediment of the religion of Jesus. We are coming more and more to see that its essence lies, just as Jesus made it, in the spread of the spirit of altruism, the spirit of thoughtfulness, not for self but for others."

The Rev. Mr. Will declared "the man is expressing a hope rather than a fact."

He said the American Youth Commission, acting under the American Council on Education, last summer made a thorough and systematic study of youth in the United States. Quoting from this survey he said:

"For all its alleged decadence as a vital force, the church still retains a substantial measure of its original appeal. Three-fourths of the youth considered themselves church members. The majority of young people want to be identified as church members and later to have it known that they participated in its devotional activities. In the minds of the great majority of youth, the church is neither a public forum nor a recreational center. It still retains its original character as a place of worship."

Pastor Bewildered.

Dr. Ryland Knight, pastor of the Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist church, said he thought a quotation out of its setting was hard to interpret.

"I think he was saying that we are getting rid of some of the outside things that got hitched on to the simple Christian faith, and as we get rid of them the faith will become more vital," he said.

"The young people I come in contact with have a very wholesome outlook, and while they may be less interested in creeds and forms of religion, they are interested in seeking Christ's way of life," he added.

Dr. D. P. McGeachy, pastor of the Decatur Presbyterian church, had this to say:

"I always feel it is worth our while to listen to the scientists. We may not agree with them but if we are wise as the Apostle Paul was, we will learn something from the other fellow."

Dr. Edward G. Mackay, pastor of the First Methodist church, explained that decay of certain kinds of religion would be wholesome.

"Dr. Millikan has been regarded as a friend to religion, and, doubtless, he meant to criticize non-essentials in religion, decay of which would be a wholesome thing."

E. R. HOLZ SERVICES SET FOR TOMORROW

Prominent Salvation Army Officer Will Be Buried in West View.

Funeral services for Brigadier Ernest R. Holz, one of the best known Salvation Army officers in the south and who died Thursday at Base Hospital No. 48, will be conducted at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning in Peachtree Chapel.

Lieutenant Commissioner Ernest I. Pugmire and Colonel Richard F. Stretton will officiate at the burial, which will be in the Salvation Army plot in West View cemetery under direction of Brandon-Bond-Condor.

Brigadier Holz came to Atlanta in 1934 as principal of the Southern Territorial Training School and six months ago was appointed young people's secretary for the southern region, the position he held at the time of his death.

A native of Syracuse, N. Y., he was first commissioned in the Salvation Army in 1912. He served as a chaplain with the A. E. F. during the World War, and was a member of the Atlanta Kiwanis Club, American Legion Post No. 1. He was active in the management of the annual Salem camp meeting and the new Atlanta Boys' Club which he helped to organize.

KIWANIS TO INSTALL OFFICERS TOMORROW

Officers for the ensuing year will be installed by the Atlanta Kiwanis Club at its regular meeting at 12:30 o'clock tomorrow at the Ansley hotel.

Taking office will be George A. Geise, president; Faber A. Bolinger, vice president; Dr. J. C. Wardlaw, vice president; William R. Heston, treasurer; and Joe S. Shaw, secretary.

Wed 50 Years, 10 of 11 Children Living

Fifty years ago Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Lynch, of Ben Hill, said "I do," and yesterday they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at the home of their son, W. Lynch, at 237 Connecticut avenue.

ATLANTA PASTORS PLEAD FOR PEACE

built by our social and economic greed?

Hateful Forces.

"Abroad in the world this Christmas morning are divisive forces, greedy and grasping. One-sixth of the globe this Christmas morning groans under the despotic hands of ruthless dictators. One-tenth of the human race this Christmas is the slave of the materialistic ideology of the totalitarian states."

"It is not there that we can look for the love of God amongst men," he continued, "but in the hearts of millions and millions of angels, the watching and hoping and tongue who, with us, are singing their 'peace to men who will be good.'"

"Christmas is not just an historic event of two thousand years ago. It is a perennial and unquenchable emotion in the hearts of men. Christianity is persecuted in one part of the world, as it was in the days of the Caesars. Christianity is banned in another, but like hope, it springs eternal in the human heart."

"The Christmas story of God's love for the children of men is the one thing that gives coherence and meaning to an otherwise purposeless confusion."

Mankind Stirred.
Dr. Stuart R. Oglesby, pastor of Central Presbyterian church, declared:

"Nearly 2,000 years ago in a little town in an obscure country, among a little known people, a baby was born. Today, whether sincerely or insincerely, that little baby's birth is being celebrated all over the world. No other occasion has so gripped the imagination and stirred the heart of mankind as this. In wonder and hope we look across the centuries and date all incidents and experiences from the time Jesus was born."

"The things at His birth which stir our hearts are the simple, quiet things—the singing of the angels, the watching and worship of the shepherds, the gifts of the wise men and the little baby lying helpless in its mother's arms, amidst strange yet utterly wholesome surroundings."

"In this manger scene we find the absence of those things which bulk as most important in the life of the world today. There was no physical might displayed, there was no pomp and majesty, there was no noise and tumult. Selfishness, ambition and hate were conspicuous by their absence. On the other hand, the scene was radiant with its simplicity, its childlikeness, its love and the infinite patience of God."

"These latter qualities were not only the qualities associated with the life of Jesus as a baby. They were also the qualities and characteristics which were most prominent in Him during the full term of His manhood and ministry. They are the qualities which are most powerful for the remaking of men and nations, yet they are the qualities which are most neglected today and which even Christian people seemingly have ceased to value."

Never Afraid.
"There are those who are predicting dire things for the future. We may have to go through a period of testing. The church and Christianity have passed through many, many crises and may do so again. But they have never been afraid of them."

"It is not the crises ahead that we should fear. Rather let us fear lest we should ever turn aside from the qualities exalted at Bethlehem and depend upon the qualities exalted by the sinful world. Let us keep our hearts in our hearts at this Christmas season, in the love, the love and patience. Perhaps we may find that we have come closer to Jesus than ever before."

Dr. Ryland Knight, pastor of Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist church, said:

"Joy is the outstanding word at Christmas. Joy is a richer word than mirth, a more permanent word than fun, a more blessed word at Christmas. The angels' message to the shepherds was joy: 'Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy.'"

"Debauchery crowds out joy. So do selfishness and cynicism. But if Christmas has a chance, it sounds its great message of joy unto every heart."

Season of Joy.

"Christmas is the season of joy because the spirit of kindness becomes dominant, because the eternal child in every one of us asserts itself, because our faith in goodness revives, and because at Christmas our religion becomes simple and natural. May each of us know the joy which Christmas brings!"

Rev. Dr. D. P. McGeachy, pastor of Decatur Presbyterian church, observed:

"Christmas is especially a home affair. Jesus of Nazareth was born into a family, and the saddest man in Georgia is the man who is having to spend Christmas away from his family circle."

"And yet the real joy of Christmas depends on having the right sort of family to spend it with. Christ would never have come to that Jewish family long ago if he had not been a truly religious home. Consequently I am pleading today for homes in which religion has first place."

"In the fourth chapter of Deuteronomy we are told that God taught the people and that so the people are commanded to teach their children and their children's children."

"The one thing America needs today is to be just what Moses is exhorting Israel to be these centuries ago, and the secret of being great and prosperous is unchanged through the ages. Robert Burns describes a home with its family worship and then he says:

"From scenes like these old Scotia's grandeur springs, that makes her loved at home, revered abroad. And for once in his life at least Burns is saying just what the Book says to us today—have religion in the home and all will be well everywhere else."

Step in Divine Plan.

Dr. Louie D. Newton, pastor of Druid Hills Baptist church, said: "Christmas is one of the evidences of the fulfillment of God's promises to man—the promise which He made in the Garden of Eden when Adam and Eve willfully forsook God's way and fell into the snare of Satan's clever lies—a promise of redemption and reconciliation."

"The birth of the Savior is but one of the steps in the divine plan of redemption, but an absolutely essential step, as is every chapter in the unfolding story of God's love to man. Before the foundations of the world were laid, a lamb was slain, and this lamb of God that takes away the sins of the world, is the Son of God, born of the Virgin Mary."

"Well may we join our voices with the heavenly host praising God, and saying, 'Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.' Christmas, therefore, is essentially a time of great joy because it reveals in tender terms the heart of God whose love is commended toward us in the while we were yet sinners, Jesus Christ came into the world to reveal the Father's heart of love, taking upon Himself the form of man and yet without sin, dying upon the cross as a propitiation for the sins of the race, bursting the bonds of death and well ascending again to the Father's right hand, interceding there in our behalf 'till He comes again."

"Christmas speaks to our hearts, therefore, of the love of God which lights the way, which is the guide, and at last the goal for every trusting heart."

CrimePageBlank While Convivials Keep Police Busy

Atlanta had a merry, although somewhat moist Christmas, but the conviviality engendered by the occasion came near taxing police facilities to the limit.

Exuberant celebrants, taking advantage of the opportunity to procure legal whisky for the first Christmas in more than 20 years, imbibed somewhat freely of the "good that comes" with the result that 378 spent the day as "guests" at the Decatur street jail, lodged there on charges of drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

Records at police headquarters showed that 817 calls were received at the police radio station during 24 hours. Most were drunk and disorderly cases.

Despite this, Chief of Police Hornsby said last night the day had been "the quietest holiday from a crime viewpoint in my 25 years of policing." No major crimes were reported and while several accidents were on record, only one fatality occurred and injuries resulting from others were not of a serious nature.

predicted prompt action in that chamber.

Administration leaders in congress hoped to avoid controversy over the administration of relief during consideration of the supplemental appropriation. They said congress would have ample opportunity to debate revision of the relief program when the regular appropriation for the next fiscal year is considered.

Senate commerce committee members are planning a thorough investigation of the WPA administration, however, in connection with hearings on the nomination of Harry Hopkins to be secretary of commerce.

Some committee members said Hopkins would be called upon to answer any criticism of his WPA administration which might be made in the forthcoming report by the senate campaign expenditures committee.

The committee already has condemned some WPA activities during the last campaign. It will file a report before congress convenes.

Campaign Report.

The house campaign expenditures committee also will report by January 3. Chairman Lewis, Democrat, Colorado, said about 95 percent of the committee's $20,000 appropriation would be returned because no campaign activities had been reported which required investigation.

Another investigating group—the house committee studying un-American activities—will report on the unfolding story of God's January 2. Chairman Dies, Democrat, Texas, who will ask an additional $150,000 to carry on the committee's work, said the report merely would summarize testimony and would make no recommendations for legislation.

House Democrats and Republicans will meet in separate party caucuses January 2. The Democratic majority intends to re-elect Representative Bankhead, Democrat, Alabama, to the speakership and again choose Representative Rayburn, Democrat, Texas, for the majority leadership.

Representatives Martin, Republican, Massachusetts, and Wadsworth, Republican, New York, have been mentioned most prominently for the minority leadership.

den who had taught music in Savannah schools for 37 years, was killed Saturday by an automobile as she crossed a downtown Savannah street. Police reports said the car was driven by Miss Velma Boyington, of Savannah.

Pre-holiday accidents Friday took a toll of four lives. Wilbur Tapley, 11, and Harold Tandy, 14, both of Greeland, but not brothers, met death in a collision on the Savannah highway at Claxton.

Jimmy Landers, of Sarasota, Fla., was killed in a wreck near Pelham.

C. O. Aultman, 59, a farmer of Colquitt county, was struck and killed by an automobile between Norman Park and Crossland.

Violent Deaths

TOTAL 164 IN WEEK END
By The Associated Press.
Death, always the violent companion of holiday revelry, reached across the nation during the week end to take at least 164 lives with another 24 hours of the Christmas holiday yet to be recorded.

As usual, automobile accidents took the major toll—121 based on early reports—while the remainder of the fatalities resulted from such causes as burnings, hunting accidents, slayings, and train deaths.

Last Christmas, more than 500 lives were claimed during the week end when the holiday fell on Saturday—but this year the period reached from Friday through Monday in many places.

Only a comparative few died from burns—among them a mother and two children killed in a water heater explosion in their Kinsley (Kan.) home, and four negroes burned to death in a tenement fire in Newark, N. J.

Lack of snow and ice in many portions of the country helped keep traffic fatalities low, but the clear though cold weather, bringing out many motorists, probably accounted for a considerable number of those who died on the nation's highways.

There were few reports of homicide deaths—the most notable, however, being that of a husband shot to death in Elyria, Ohio, while his wife was seriously wounded, when they attempted to take a Christmas tree from a roadside for their two children. The owner of the land, tired, he said, of so many tree thefts, cut down the two with a shotgun blast.

A woman in Buffalo, N. Y., returning from midnight mass was slain—police said—by her estranged husband who also slashed her niece and cut his own throat.

Quitman Petition Asks More Co-operation in Enforc- ing Liquor Laws.

QUITMAN, Ga., Dec. 25.—The Quitman city commission has addressed a resolution to the State Revenue Commission petitioning better co-operation in enforcing liquor laws, stating that the city has been confronted by "an apparently indifferent attitude" on the part of state authorities, and that "it would appear the State Revenue Department is more concerned with raising revenue than in law enforcement."

The resolution, copies of which have been sent to Governor Rivers and to H. Grady Head, follows:

Whereas, the general assembly of Georgia adopted, in 1937, a measure repealing the prohibition law in Georgia and in those counties voting for legislation and control; and

Whereas, in the belief that the state would exercise full measure of control to prevent further illicit sales of alcohol in Georgia, Brooks county, ordinarily a dry county, voted for legislation and control; and

Whereas, the city of Quitman, in the firm belief that this was for the best interest of all concerned, adopted strict rules and regulations having for their purpose a discontinuance of bootlegging and all form of law control; and

Whereas, in the administration of these laws this board has been confronted with an apparently indifferent attitude on the part of the state officials, and upon investigation of the licensed dealers it would appear that the State Revenue Department has been more concerned with raising revenue than with law enforcement;

Now, therefore, be it resolved by the board of commissioners of the city of Quitman that the Revenue Department of the state of Georgia be petitioned to give its co-operation in the enforcement of the law and to this end make use of all available means to prevent illegal sales by licensed dealers or others, and sales to habitual drunkards, or otherwise in violation of the law.

Letter in Constitution Started Their Romance

MR. AND MRS. OSCAR E. LANCASTER.

Georgia Couple Wedded 50 Years, Met Through Note in Constitution

West Point Girl's Missive to 'Aunt Susie,' of 'Cousins' Corner,' Led to Three-Year Long-Distance Romance and Marriage to Jasper County Farmer.

By JACK TUBBS,

State News Editor.

SHADY DALE, Ga., Dec. 25.—

When Ida Lancaster, then a mere slip of a girl at 15, wrote and posted a letter in 1885 to "Aunt Susie," who conducted the "Cousins' Corner" in The Weekly Atlanta Constitution, she little dreamed she was on the threshold of her life's great romance.

Fate, though, was playing its tricks that day.

And so, this week, she celebrated with her husband the 50th anniversary of that romance's fruition.

Ida, a daughter of James Drew and Sarah Jenkins Lancaster, lived then in West Point, where she was born May 24, 1870.

Read by a Lancaster.

Miles and miles away, down in the little community of Aikenton, on the Putnam-Jasper county line, sturdy 23-year-old Oscar E. Lancaster idly turning the pages of The Constitution, found his gaze centered on Ida's letter. He read back to read it a second time, his interest quickening. It was signed "Ida Lancaster," their surnames were the same. Possibly there was a distant relationship, he mused. Slowly, somewhere deep within him, the letter stirred a mysterious something he could not then define.

That strange feeling continued for days after he penned a dubious "reply" to Ida's letter, but when a note came to him directed from her, his misgivings were forgotten. They were unrelated.

But that was in 1885.

In the next three years, what began as a casual correspondence grew and flowered into romance. One spring he left his plowed furrows and made the long journey to West Point to see Ida. Again, in August, he made the trip aboard the hot, dusty steam cars.

Married in 1888.

And then, in December, in 1888, his crops laid by, he journeyed to West Point once more—to claim his bride. They were married five days before Christmas, with the late Rev. J. Mercer Callaway as the officiating minister, and their honeymoon was the exciting ride back to Jasper county, where they settled down on a new farm near here.

That was 50 years ago. The ensuing years have been good to the Lancasters. There have been lean years and good years on their Jasper county farm, but they have prospered. And today, because of their unselfish devotion to each other, their loved ones and friends, and their equally unselfish service to their community, they have won the lasting respect of all who know them.

This week—Tuesday—they celebrated their golden wedding day with an informal supper at their home here. Among their guests were their three sons, Dr. E. M. Lancaster and J. A. Lancaster, of Shady Dale, and A. W. Lancaster, of Jacksonville, Fla., and their two daughters, Mrs. W. W. Garrett, of Uriah, Ala., and Mrs. M. L. Stone, of Tallahassee, Fla.

Farmer, Civic Leader.

Mr. Lancaster, a son of James Michael and Kitty Levever Lancaster, was born in Putnam county January 26, 1862. He began farming in his youth, and continued at that work until his retirement a few years ago. He has been identified with all progressive civic, educational and religious movements for the betterment of his community, and has been active also in fraternal work, having served many terms as worshipful master of Walton Masonic Lodge No. 200.

Mrs. Lancaster is active in Baptist Woman's Missionary Union work, and is an enthusiastic member of the United Daughters of the Confederacy and of the Daughters of the American Revolution. She has served as regent of the D. A. R. chapter here.

Warming 'Pads' Used on Farms For Plant Beds

ATHENS, Ga., Dec. 25.—(P)—Now comes the electric warming pad for hotbeds on Georgia farms. Its purpose is to warm the tootsies of plants through the cold season before they are transplanted to the farm fields and left on their own. J. L. Calhoun, Georgia Extension Service rural electrification specialist, said electric hotbeds permit growers to control the rate of plant growth and produce healthier plants. Sixty feet of cable laced through the soil of a 6-by-8-foot bed will keep it plenty warm for the winter, from just above freezing to 100 degrees fahrenheit, as desired, Calhoun said. Twice that cable will serve a 6-by-12-foot bed. Calhoun said use of electric heat for the plant beds was gaining favor on Georgia farms.

AND FEAR RIDES.

It is almost impossible to live one day in these times without reflecting upon the dread shadows that creep across the fields and cities of other lands—shadows that presage the black silhouettes of the bombers, flying high and fast; shadows that presage the slogging hopelessness of the marching armies and shadows that presage death in every home.

In this country, the awful fear that lives in every home of Europe and Asia does not yet exist. Most people celebrate the birth of the Christ-child in peace, in the midst of plenty, and with a contentment of mind that bears no forbidding.

Yet, even in the United States many know fear, and want, and pain, and face the future with sick hearts, starving for material sustenance, for spiritual solace and bodily warmth. They sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, though others more fortunate have tried to ease the burden of their fear. On Christmas most men try to comfort those of their fellow men who have not kept the pace. Yet, tomorrow is another day, and of that day, what? There has been plenty, but a full stomach and a full heart cannot last the year when want closes the door.

It was Zacharias who spoke of his son, John, saying that he had come to give light . . . to guide our feet into the way of peace. Were he to look upon this world today, he could not but wonder at the turmoil in the hearts of men and of mankind. He gave his son to be the prophet of the Highest, yet man has turned again, as he has before, from the path of peace to follow the rider of the horse "that was red . . . power was given to him that sat thereon to take peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another."

The leaders of men grasp for temporal power, saying to the many that they must worship the state before God . . . that they must serve Mammon over all else. Many of these multitudes are ready to follow—they have known want, starvation, degradation and Mammon has been a willing and a rich mistress for the nonce. Given power, these leaders seek to carry the sword to greater glory, heeding not the truism that those who live by the sword must die by the sword. In that, the people of the world face recurring chaos, for men have tasted blood and seek to bury want and starvation in conquest and death.

A few voices cry out that peace should not rest in such feeble things, but their voices are stifled by the wall that autocracy has thrown around its slaves. There is pitiful futility in the mightiest efforts to avoid the gathering catastrophe, and yet it still must be that hope will live with sufficient strength to cast off the bonds of the sword for the raiment of peace.

In this country there has been a questing for balance that will wipe out for all time the specter of privation among the people; some have said that this quest was an arraying of class against class, yet it contains within it the greater vision of a day in which families will not be hurled from the pinnacle of plenty and happiness of the Christmas day back into want and misery on the following days, when the erstwhile open hearts of others close against their plight.

It is the same throughout the world. If Hitler and Mussolini and Stalin and the Mikado could but see it, the peoples of the world might well live in peace. It is not too much to hope that out of their intrinsic weakness and the fear of others will come a balancing of the world's rich storehouses and open lands for the greater good of all. That day must come, but never before has there been the complete realization of its need. Perhaps the gathering storm has mounted too high for hope. But storms break and pass, and in the quiet of the aftermath man can remember their causes and take heed. This last is a fearsome hope, yet one which could have been well remembered and heeded a bare 20 years ago.

It seems ages since the democracies showed enough in the way of backbone to hold a chiropractor's interest.

FOR AMERICAN ECONOMICS

Continuing a discussion of libertarianism, as a force of government, Fortune Magazine in the current issue advocates a cutting away of the dependence of this country upon the economic thought of Europe, developed for other peoples, other circumstances and other times.

The editorial asserts, rightly, that native economic thought has lacked unity and integration; no American economist has approached the stature of thinkers of the type of Adam Smith and, under present circumstances, it is imperative thought processes be developed which are applicable to the peculiarities of the economic structure that has been built in this country.

Fortune expressed the belief that libertarianism will develop a course under which present-day restrictions upon greater industrial development are eased; that the nation must turn from the path which is followed today—that of leveling industry to its present production at a time when it should be possible to permit business and agriculture some incentive to finding the means of reaching a greater consuming group than has been possible heretofore. Capital at the same time is warned it has not been imaginative enough and that a further advance is dependent upon the recapturing of this element on the part of producers.

It may be that congress, in the approaching session, will have an opportunity to free industry for growth along American lines under a system of government which retains the basic principles of American revolutionary thought, yet which imposes a new series of checks and balances against abuse of the individual liberties.

When Fortune points out that no American economic genius has pointed the path along native lines, it may be it disregards a distinctly American phenomenon—the fact that public economic thought has leaned in the last year from Rooseveltian paternalism to the pattern being woven by a loosely-knit group of Democrats and Republican liberals. Their road is becoming evident from the proceedings of the temporary national economic committee, the so-called profit-sharing committee, which examined incentive taxation as well, and in the public expressions and official acts of Secretary of State Hull and of Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina; George, of Georgia, and Byrd and Glass, of Virginia. In other words, the future may be charted by a group of Americans rather than by a lone thinker of the Smith, Pareto or Marx type.

In this connection, it should again be pointed out that those who attempt to conform or modify Smith, or Marx, or Treitschke, work under a fallacy in that they seek to apply principles devised for a particular condition or period to a totally different set of circumstances. Economic thought, to be sound, must stem from the elements which give it substance. While certain elements are ever-changing and can never be static unless that economy to which they refer is a dying one. There is in process of birth, in this country, an economy rooted in American principles and which will look from the land frontiers to the human frontiers for its next great era.

Fortune would do well to examine the men who have been slowly formulating, out of the mistakes of the past and the static governmental paternalism of the present, the new pattern of the American economy, which will not, and cannot, be anything but one which extends rather than narrows the liberties of the people.

WHERE DANGER LURKS

The greatest danger to world peace today is the increasingly desperate condition of the German economy under Hitler. War is often the last refuge of the dictator when his house of cards begins crumbling. It may be so in this case and, for that reason, conflict may not be as far off as many hope.

The German attempt to obtain ransom for Jews in the Reich is based on the fact that this economic structure is fast crashing. The world may well consider whether it would not be better to pay the extortion and bolster Nazi economy in the hope it will fall without the ultimate recourse of war.

German foreign trade has taken a sharp turn for the worse under the impact of widespread boycotts, and the trend may be expected to continue as Britain and the United States turn their trade guns on the sharp practices of the Reich. In 1937, the German nation had a favorable trade balance built up through the barter arrangements that had then proved so successful. This year, however, it is indicated essential imports have exceeded exports by at least $100,000,000, an impossible situation for the Reich.

The result is evident in the appointment of a co-ordinator for the machine industry, so that a raw material shortage will not affect the flow of supplies for the armaments program. His work is not concentrated on improvement of conditions for the export trade, but to side-track everything but armament needs.

The danger rests not in ambition, but in a driving desire to remain in power.

Russian observers report the climate at the pole is becoming definitely warmer, and the next party of floating savants may have to bring their own floc.

Editorial of the Day

PARENTS AND THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY
(From The Columbia State.)

The man and his wife were riding to the shopping center on a bus.

"I have a list of the things the children want," the woman said.

"Well," commented the man thoughtfully, "I'd like to give them everything they want, and a lot more. But we'll have to give them only what we can afford to give them."

All over South Carolina thousands of other husbands and wives are facing the problem of adjusting expenditures to means, at a sacrifice of desires.

Next month the general assembly will meet, and it, too, must face the problem now being faced by so many parents. It would be nice if the state government could be a Santa Claus of unlimited means. But it cannot be. Expenditures must be adjusted to income, at a sacrifice of desires.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

BATTLE IN THE OFFING WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—The bureaucratic battle of the century is in the offing, if Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board has his way. He has urged the President to ask congress for a critical study of all the monetary and economic activities of the government, with a view to co-ordinating them.

As it happens, the chief Eccles rival in the monetary and economic field is Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. Both men wear scars from a number of previous rows. As the Eccles notion is to let congress hold hearings, openly debating the question of treasury or reserve board predominance, the violence of the possible row can be imagined. Some five or six other agencies would also be involved, but the protagonists would unquestionably be Eccles and Morgenthau.

The Eccles plan for a congressional study was presented to the President some weeks ago, when the earnest federal reserve chairman carried a memorandum on the subject to Warm Springs. There he argued his case in a long talk with the President, who seemed interested.

The central Eccles theme is that, at present, powers over such matters as silver purchases, excess banking reserves, banking interest rates, banking supervision, gold policy and the like are scattered about among the treasury, federal reserve and other agencies in such a way that concerted effort is impossible. He also believes that there are certain large questions, such as congressional attitude toward investment from abroad, which need congressional examination.

SOP TO CONGRESS There's considerable truth in the Eccles arguments, but the result of a congressional study such as he suggests is decidedly problematical. For one thing, Eccles is regarded by Senator Carter Glass as combining the most trying features of a minor prophet and a soft money man. Glass would certainly rally his friends to tear the hide off Eccles. Then co-ordination of economic and monetary power would certainly require some infringement of the treasury's prerogatives, which would not only arouse Henry Morgenthau, as already suggested, but also cause trouble on the Hill.

Possibly Eccles hopes to get around these difficulties by playing up to the congressional ego. If the President accepts the Eccles suggestion, he will not whisper a plan of his own, merely describing the problem in the terms of the Eccles memo, and asking congress to do something about it. Such a procedure, in any case, would be in line with the White House's new congressional strategy.

BANK ROW An example of the sort of thing Eccles thinks congress ought to do is to be found in the memorandum of the comptroller of the currency at the treasury, and in the Reserve, the comptroller of the currency at the treasury, and in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, all have important power over banks. The Eccles memo offers a plan to transfer the comptroller of the currency's office from the treasury to FDIC, and to confer on the FDIC all the Federal Reserve Board's present authority to examine banks.

Thus, bank examination would be wholly concentrated at the FDIC, which should be managed, according to Eccles, by a board consisting of a chairman appointed by the President and confirmed by the senate, and the chairman of the Federal Reserve and the secretary of the treasury or their designees.

Shortly after Eccles' return from Warm Springs, he gave a copy of his memo to Secretary Morgenthau. Probably the passage of such a bill would be one of the most important results of the great Eccles-Morgenthau struggle.

It occurred last spring, after the resort to spending, when Eccles lowered Federal Reserve requirements in return for a promise from the President that bank examiners' rules would also be relaxed. It is Eccles' theory that strict bank examiners' rules, by forcing banks to keep superior liquidities, have resulted in hard times. The theory is not shared by Morgenthau, and, before Eccles managed to get most of what he wanted, there was an unholy row between Eccles and RFC Chairman Jesse H. Jones on one side, and Morgenthau and his lieutenants on the other.

Experiment

In Sophistication.

Of all the arguments and discussions which have raged about various angles of the motion picture business, none recurs more frequently than that old regret that really intelligent pictures can't be made, profitably, because there isn't a sufficiently large audience of intelligent patrons. That so many pictures are moronic simply because so many of the folks who provide the reason for their making, via the box office, have talent of the moron in their mental make-up.

Remembering all this, it was with much trepidation that one of the major Hollywood studios decided to make a picture of George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion." They thought, probably, wouldn't appeal to the great mass of moviegoers but that the "literati" would enjoy it and, perhaps, provide a select audience of sufficient size to defray a substantial part of the cost of making. Anyway, it would be their contribution to the movement for more intelligent screen productions.

When the picture was ready, they decided to "test" the public reaction in New York. Not in one of the great picture theaters, they couldn't hope to fill those seats, but they put it in a smaller theater, advertised it with conservatism and restraint and sat back to await results.

Bernard Shaw

In the Morning Hours.

Well, sir, they haven't been able to accommodate the crowds. The picture had shown 200 times by December 20 and was still packing 'em in. They moved up the morning opening hour of the theater to 9:45, and on one Saturday had to stay open until 11 a. m., to accommodate the crowds that streamed into the theater until 2 o'clock in the morning.

What'd a thought it? Who's more, they have kept specially trained observers at the theater to report on the crowd conditions. They reported that fully 90 per cent of the audiences are the regular moviegoers—the suspected morons—and that only 10 per cent are the type of people who consider themselves above the average in intelligence and sophistication.

And, added the observers significantly, "both brands of moviegoers seem to laugh equally as loud and often."

It is now reported that the producers of "Pygmalion" are still a trifle uncertain about its reception by the country as a whole. This test was in New York, and, after all, New York isn't much like most of the United States.

They are planning a few more "test" bookings early in the new year, upon the outcome of which will rest their decision on whether or not to put the picture into general release.

How nervous these Hollywood highbrows are about the brain capacity of most of us!

Food for Contemplation.

Came across a paragraph in a story the other day, that stuck in my memory. Should be a text for much serious contemplation by Americans of today.

The story was about the celebration of Christmas this year, in the various countries of the world. And, speaking of Germany, it said that Herr and Frau Schmidt and all the little Schmidts would celebrate around the candle-lit fir tree, but that it would be topped, this year, with a Nazi swastika instead of a star of Bethlehem.

Doesn't that epitomize the crime of Nazism? Think it over. And, for ironic whimsicality to your thoughts, recall that the swastika emblem originated among the Jews of old.

Twenty-five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Friday, December 26, 1913: "Los Angeles, December 25.—Hundreds of unemployed and hungry began rioting in the plaza late this afternoon. A large force of policemen were called out. They cleared the streets of all traffic and started in with their clubs to end the disturbance."

And Fifty

Years Ago.

From the news columns of Wednesday, December 26, 1888: "Quitman, Ga., December 25.—(Special)—We have had today an eager, orderly, jostling throng. The utmost good feeling has prevailed. Everyone seems to have had money, and the dealers in those things that enhance Christmas happiness have reaped a harvest."

Long Christmas.

Many countries in Europe celebrate Christmas on the principle that you cannot have too much of a good thing. In Italy, Holland, and elsewhere, the first celebrations begin on December 6, St. Nicholas' Day, and last till Twelfth Night on January 6. In Poland the Christmas season lasts till February 2.

'Buried' Wrong Party.

The Rev. O. J. Fix, of Burlington, Moravia, Iowa, arrived at the funeral party had gathered at the services for the late C. W. Jones. Unadvised to the contrary he thought it was Mrs. Jones who had died so he preached a sermon about her life. He did not discover his mistake until he viewed the body at the end of the service.

This Morning

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II.

"Hymn well the great Confederate South, Virginia, first, and Lee!"

More and more southerners are coming to understand now that the south is forced to a regional position whether it likes it or not and that in a day when politics is so related to everything else, this regionalism must have political expression. As this column and others have often pointed out the Democratic party is the only place in which the south can count politically. If the south can stand together as a region in the councils and conventions of that party, it can bargain for its rights in such matters as freight rates, tariffs, wages and hour laws, etc. But let us never overlook the fact that standing together as a region means standing all together, not merely a stand by our conservatives alone, or by our liberals alone. Southwide organization, either politically or in an economic sense, will get nowhere if it belongs to either the right or the left. Too much of our organization and plan for organization has the tragic limitation of representing not the whole south but some one or another group in the south.

All over the south at this moment there is talk of a great stand for southern interests and rights which have been ignored or violated by federal governments, Democratic and Republican, ever since the Confederate war. To hope that such a stand can be contrived and taken merely on a basis of opposition to the New Deal is even more misguided than to hope it can be based on support of the New Deal. Here is something, like so many other present things in the south, whose hope of success depends upon the ability of our people to forget their disagreement and to stand together for things that existed here long before there was such a deal and will continue long, after unless something is done by the south itself.

Agreeing with this column on the awfulness of swing, jazz, loud-music-with-meals, etc., Music Teacher Harrell Biard, of Birmingham, writes: "From conversation with many types of people I think that our restaurants and radio stations far underestimate the average intelligence of their public in taking it for granted that we are 'jitterbugs.' I feel sure that a scientifically conducted survey would reveal that 'jazz' has played no small part in creating the psychological condition that have proven fertile ground for a lot of 'isms' and crimes."

People who understand that the maintenance and development of the south needs to be done stone by stone, community by community, will read with much profit a volume entitled "How To Promote Community and Industrial Development" recently published by Harper. The author is Atlanta's Frederick H. McDonald, widely known consulting engineer who has represented many communities and industries in surveys and knows what he is talking about.

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

DETOURS.

Dr. William V. Gardner, pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Atlanta, preached a sermon on a recent Sunday on detours, taking as his text "Brothers, I Would Like for You to Understand That I Have Often Purposed to Come to You, Though Up to Now I Have Been Prevented." (Moffatt's translation of Romans 1:13.) A friend has kindly sent me a copy of the sermon.

I have been a blessing to my own heart, and I take the column this day after Christmas to pass the gist of the sermon on.

Paul was in Corinth, having finished his work in the east, and desiring now to go above all things to that world center. He longed for Rome, he planned for Rome; but God had other plans for him. He must return to Jerusalem and minister there yet a while. He must detour!

"All of us feel the truth of this ancient experience," said Dr. Gardner. "The sons and daughters of men meet with enough anguish in life to know assuredly that none of their traveling must be on the side roads. There you will find the young people who have finished their college preparation, but ahead is a detour sign. There you will find the men and women who seem to be within the very grasp of life's goal, when suddenly an illness throws up a detour sign. There you will find husbands and wives rent asunder by some sudden avenging fury, and they face a detour sign."

Lightning Strikes.

Steve Abbott, 71-year-old father of eight children, was killed recently on his farm near Monticello, Ky., when a tree he was sawing fell on his head. Four years ago, in December, his wife was killed when a limb of a tree she was cutting fell on her.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

"YONDER COMES DAY" Yesterday morning I was awakened early. I lay there and watched day come to the windows. The words of an old song came to me. I heard it first years ago when I was in south Georgia. It was night. There was a wood fire with logs burning and the smell of wood smoke was a nostalgia in the air, prodding the memory.

A negro picked a banjo and sang in a minor key, the song.
"Day, Oh, Day . . .
Yonder comes day,
Day done broke into my soul,
Yonder comes day!"

So, I watched day come, smudging the windows with gray. Far away some firecrackers popped. A dog barked. There was the passing sound of a motor. And then, there came day! It was present. More motors sounded. The day began.

It was pleasant to lie there and think of how many eager children were waking and rushing to the trees and the gifts, wide-eyed, they saw the dolls, the toys, the lights, the packages. It was bitter to think there were homes where there were no trees and no toys and not much happiness. Yet, it was comforting to know that never a year passes but there are fewer of them; that now as never before in all the history of this world there is work going on, seeking to see that this nation becomes a better place for all the people to live. And that it is, today, a better place to live than ever before since 1789 when a document called the Constitution of the United States was signed and made effective.

So, thinking of that, it made the day better to throw back the covers, to stick feet into slippers, to pull on a robe and go watch a small girl's eyes as she saw the tree and the toys.

"Day, Oh, Day . . .
Yonder comes day,
Day done broke into my soul,
Yonder comes day!"

"... AND CARRIES TWO GUNS" Yesterday I went to call on a gentleman whose small son had received a western suit, a hat, a bandana for a mask and two long, toy pistols. "I want you to know the rules of this western order," he said. "My son has been made a member and I am interested in his future."

He handed me a set of rules. They read:
"The members of this western club—
1. Never smoke.
2. Never swear.
3. Always wear two guns.
"I am very hopeful," said the father. "If really he becomes proficient with the guns he may become a successful bandit. I prefer that to his becoming an unsuccessful bandit such as the Musica brothers, who were the soul or propriety. They did not carry guns."
"He may even become a tradition and known as 'The Gentleman Bandit.' He may, when he holds up a father instruct the father never to permit his son to smoke or swear. I like to think of him delivering a moral with each holdup. This would sort of even things up. He might even attain a lot of publicity. There might be men who would say, 'I was held up by the moral bandit in the park last night but he gave me such excellent advice. I do not intend to ask the police for any action. It was a pleasure to be held up.'"

The father looked on fondly. The son was hiding behind a chair and holding up a neighbor's child. "Never smoke, never swear and always carry two guns," murmured the father. "I was born many years too soon!"

"DICE, FROM TEN TO TWELVE" Quite the oddest Christmas party was one given by one of the young men around town. Grown weary of cocktail parties, he combined a cocktail party with an innovation. It was a dice game. The invitations read: "You cordially are invited to attend a crap game and cocktail party from 10 to 12. Checks honored. R. S. V. P."

He did not intend to make expenses but sought merely to provide his guests with some rest. "At most cocktail parties," he said, "people stand around until their feet become very weary. I merely seek to give them an opportunity to get off their feet and kneel for a while."

The party was a tremendous success. Some of the more ardent guests didn't go home at 12. They insisted he didn't say whether midnight or noon.

FATHER'S DAY STORY? From Nashville, relayed by Mr. Fred Russell, of Nashville and the Banner, comes a true Tennessee story. There was a family which had two children and a dog which the children loved with a devotion which only a child may have for a dog. One morning the dog, called Laddie, was run over and killed.

The mother called the children in and explained what had happened to Laddie. They accepted it philosophically. Then the mother took them to the back porch where were the remains of Laddie. The children began to shriek and have hysterics. The mother at last calmed them. "What's the matter," she asked, "you were all right a while ago."

"We thought you said 'Daddy,' they explained.

The Farmer Goes Broke If He Buys Corn For Mules That Won't Plow in the Cornfield

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Men who think in such terms as a nation's wheat crop, the textile industry and the plight of the renter class may have special gifts not shared by common men, but often they lack the quality commonly called horse sense. Much dealing with theories has blinded them to simple, elemental facts.

Men like these are now concerned with the plight of that one-third of our people who are admittedly ill-fed, ill-housed and ill-clothed. The remedy they seek is some method of increasing the income of these unfortunate.

When that is done, they say, these 40 million will be greater consumers, and their ability to buy more will mean greater prosperity for all producers.

That is true enough, but there are only two possible ways of increasing their income. One is to give them money as a dole from the public treasury, and the other is to make them earn it. To give them the money outright would be to declare them useless to the country and establish them as an everlasting burden. Two-thirds would forever deny themselves and give up part of their earnings to support a pariah class. That is a monstrous thought. And there would be no gain in consumption, for the money given to one group would be taken from another, and the taxes paid by the two-thirds would in exact proportion reduce their ability to consume. Divide it any way you will, a dollar still buys only a dollar's worth.

If money is not given to the unfortunate third, they can obtain it only by earning it. And there is only one way to earn new wealth. It must be created—by producing it, or processing it, or doing a service that adds to it.

Wealth is created by the man who grows wheat, the man who changes it to flour, the man who increases its value by moving it to a market. The man who cooks a lunch for these three is also doing his part to create wealth.

But all alike are producers as well as consumers, and only as producers can the unfortunate third obtain the capacity to consume more without becoming an unjust and unendurable burden on the other two-thirds.

It is still another law that each must earn his keep. Reducing production can make an artificial scarcity and artificially high prices, and thus profit one group; but the underprivileged cannot consume more, except as leeches, unless they produce more to consume.

BOWLING CATCHES DUCKPIN FANS ALONG PEACHTREE

HEAD-PIN ALLEY DRAWING CROWDS AT PIG'N WHISTLE

New Recreation Center at 2143 Peachtree Road Proving Popular.

Drawing crowds daily who are enjoying to the fullest the fun and exercise afforded by bowling, the Head-Pin Bowling alley, adjacent to Pig'n Whistle, at 2143 Peachtree road, is now one of the popular places along the north side thoroughfare.

The new alleys occupy a specially built large structure just in the rear of the restaurant, unusually well ventilated and splendidly lighted, with a modern heating system that changes the air every 26 minutes. Eight beautiful, smooth alleys, with balls and pins of the best materials, are running full tilt nearly every afternoon and every evening. The entire plant has recently been erected under the very latest standard duckpin specifications, all so well arranged, with seats for visitors and players, that bowling at this alley is a real delight.

A large entrance and side lot affords an abundance of free parking space. The alleys are under the management of Walter Warnke, who caters to a high-class patronage in his new alleys. Many ladies throughout the city, and particularly those living on the north side, have become enthusiastic bowlers, and numbers of them visit the valleys for the fun and exercise the recreation affords. Classes from schools and churches, made into teams, are frequent visitors to the alleys, and much competition is aroused among them. Mr. Warnke keeps employed a complete force of help in setting pins, and there is no delay in rolling games, for which only 15 cents per game is charged. Mr. Warnke states that many fathers bring their young sons to the alleys, and each evening sharp competition is seen among the boys and their dads.

An advantage offered in a visit to the alleys is that the Pig'n Whistle, with its handsome newly decorated dining room provides an ideal place for lunch or a complete delicious meal. The exercise of bowling frequently whets up a fine appetite, and the Pig'n Whistle, which adjoins, can furnish juicy steaks, sea food, barbecue lunches or whatever may be desired to satisfy the appetite of hungry bowlers. Go out, roll a few games, and then see how easy it is for you to step up into Pig'n Whistle and enjoy delicious foods and drinks.

HARLAND COMPANY READY TO DELIVER OFFICE SUPPLIES

Lithographing and Printing Concern Can Help With Needed Record Changes.

A new year is just around the corner. Its advent will mean, in many cases, the checking up and perhaps changing of many of the records in the office of modern business houses.

This is quite a task with some concerns—and is an important change in the life of any business—unless properly systematized and regulated. It is just at this point where the John H. Harland Company, lithographers and printers, steps in with its experience and advice, its well-thought-out systems, its excellent printing and lithograph work, and makes this type of office and clerical changes easy on the business.

The new year will bring the task of transferring records; new correspondence files must be started; ledger sheets must be headed up for the new year, and there must be arrangements made for the filing of old office records for later reference.

To prove its ability and readiness to aid in these important changes, it need only be said that the John H. Harland Company has been for the past fifteen years supplying this sort of equipment for business houses in Atlanta and the southeast. It has been a large factor in filling the needs for filing cabinets, binders, ledger sheets, and miscellaneous equipment of all kinds.

Under the direction of Arthur Hubert Jr., as retail store manager, a number of capable salesmen for the Harland Company call on business firms in Atlanta. Their work is supplemented in the store by courteous telephone and delivery service. A private telephone switchboard, with ample trunk lines, assure prompt handling of telephone orders. Complete stocks of all supplies needed in today's modern office are carried at all times.

Organized in 1923, the John H. Harland Company maintains, in addition to its retail office supply store, on Pryor street, one of the south's most complete printing and is now making insured loans on new construction under the F. H. A. plan. We invite investigation and consultation as to our investments or our loan plans.

In commenting on the foregoing statement, W. W. Lyons, president and attorney of Home Building & Loan Association said, "Attention should be called to the fact that the soundness of investments in building and loan association was recognized by the Georgia general assembly when, in the new building and loan code enacted in 1937, shares in insured building savings and loan associations were made legal investment for trustees, guardians and other fiduciaries."

"Shares in local building and loan associations are not subject to ad valorem or to taxation under the intangibles tax act."

Home Building and Loan Ass'n. Assets Now Exceed $1,100,000

Has Declared Regular Semi-Annual Dividend Since Organization in 1929; Dividends in This Time Have Exceeded $134,000.

In connection with the announcement of the declaration of its 19th consecutive semi-annual dividend, C. V. Minor, secretary and manager of the Home Building and Loan Association made the following statement:

"The Home Building and Loan Association was organized in June, 1929, and ever since then, without a break, has declared a regular semi-annual dividend payable each January 1 and July 1. The total of dividends declared during this period has been in excess of $134,000."

"The primary objects of the Association have been twofold: first, to provide a sound, safe institution where local people could invest their savings and earn a return on them sufficient to make regular saving an incentive to the average man; second, to provide funds on reasonable terms to enable people to own and pay for their homes."

"In furthering the first objective, this Association has never failed since its organization to pay a regular semi-annual dividend on savings invested with it and the rate of dividend has never been less than 4% per annum; in furthering its second objective, this Association has made 615 loans aggregating more than $1,235,000.

"During the worst depression years of 1931, 1932 and 1933 this Association and other local building and loan associations were almost the only agencies providing available funds for financing or refinancing loans on homes in this community. In this way, they performed a service to the community the true value of which can never be over estimated."

"Since the passage by congress of the amendment to the Home Owners' Loan act setting up the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation shares in this association have been insured up to $5,000 by the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation, an instrumentality of the United States government. This places behind the safety of shares in this association all the assets of that instrumentality in addition to the security of the first mortgages on real estate which have always protected our shares."

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, Dec. 25.—For the average American the year 1933 has been chiefly memorable for the struggle which began in Czechoslovakia and threatened to involve the rest of Europe in a new war.

Second most interesting, the survey shows, was the treatment of Jews and Catholics in Germany. Other leading events of the past year included Douglas Corrigan's "wrong-way" flight to Ireland, the passage of the wages and hours bill and the New England hurricane of mid-October.

Last year a similar Institute survey indicated that Americans had been chiefly concerned by domestic issues in 1932. The Ohio-Mississippi floods of that year, which affected millions of American families in the heart of the nation, were named first.

Of all the major events that took place in 1932, probably few were more clearly foreshadowed in advance than the gains made by Republican candidates in the November elections. The Institute of Public Opinion made continuous tests of American political sentiment, and as early as March, eight months before the voting, reported that the GOP would have gained about 85 additional seats in Congress if the elections had been held at that time.

The significance of this forecast was borne out on election day, when the Republicans actually picked up 83 extra seats.

WASHINGTON

Incomes Rise

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—(AP)—The Commerce Department reported today that income payments of Americans during the first 11 months of this year lagged behind those of the like period last year, but that they picked up in November at the "most pronounced" rate of the current recovery trend.

The total of $58,244,000,000 Americans paid out in the 11 months as wages, salaries, dividends, interest, income from enterprise and relief payments was 7 per cent under the total for the corresponding period of 1932, the department said.

But, it added, the pickup in November made the total for that month only two per cent below the level for the same month last year. November was the sixth consecutive month this year to show an increase over the preceding month, the department reported.

Compensation of employees for services performed during the first 11 months of 1933 declined 8 per cent from the like period a year ago. Income from dividends dropped more than 20 per cent.

All types of benefit payments—including work relief, direct relief and unemployment insurance benefits—have been substantially higher in 1933.

F. D. R. at Church

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—(AP)—President Roosevelt, surrounded by members of his family, heard the familiar Christmas message of "peace on earth" today at St. Thomas, the family church.

A crowd like snow broke through the clouds just 30 minutes before the President, in frock coat, and his party set out for the gray Episcopal church in which he and Mrs. Roosevelt worshipped 20 years ago when the President was in Wilson's little cabinet.

There was a serene, quiet air about the group as they emerged from three cars that took them to the church. A crowd of 300 gathered before the entrance, clapped but didn't cheer, out of respect for the day and the place.

The Roosevelt party is halfway down the aisle on the left side. It held the President, his wife, his daughter-in-law, Mrs. James Roosevelt, his granddaughter, Kate Roosevelt, and his secretary of commerce, Harry Hopkins, a recent widower, and Hopkins' small daughter, Diana. Hopkins and Diana were Christmas guests at the White House.

In front of the President sat his two tall slender sons, James and Franklin Jr.

They looked on a church, brave with Christmas finery: Dozens of burning candles on the altar, and many pots of poinsettias outlining the choir. They heard the melodious St. Cecilia mass, and then took holy communion.

Between the mass and the communion, the Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson, D. D., stressed the same theme the President had stressed the twilight before in his Christmas message to the nation: That peace on earth will come only from men of good will, such good will that it begins with the individual and spreads to nations.

The clergyman touched delicately on the European situation by saying, "To sidetrack war is not necessarily peace." And further, he said, "to tolerate injustice is not peace."

Favors Break

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Senator King, Democrat, Utah, proposed today that the United States sever diplomatic relations with Germany and then break off commercial ties with the Nazis.

He will support a policy that would curtail all commercial relations, he said. "Adolf Hitler can survive only as long as his government has commercial relations with other nations."

Of all the major events that took place in 1932, probably few were more clearly foreshadowed in advance than the gains made by Republican candidates in the November elections.

The Institute of Public Opinion made continuous tests of American political sentiment, and as early as March, eight months before the voting, reported that the GOP would have gained about 85 additional seats in Congress if the elections had been held at that time.

The total of $58,244,000,000 Americans paid out in the 11 months as wages, salaries, dividends, interest, income from enterprise and relief payments was 7 per cent under the total for the corresponding period of 1932, the department said.

But, it added, the pickup in November made the total for that month only two per cent below the level for the same month last year. November was the sixth consecutive month this year to show an increase over the preceding month, the department reported.

Compensation of employees for services performed during the first 11 months of 1933 declined 8 per cent from the like period a year ago. Income from dividends dropped more than 20 per cent.

All types of benefit payments—including work relief, direct relief and unemployment insurance benefits—have been substantially higher in 1933.

F. D. R. at Church

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—(AP)—President Roosevelt, surrounded by members of his family, heard the familiar Christmas message of "peace on earth" today at St. Thomas, the family church.

A crowd like snow broke through the clouds just 30 minutes before the President, in frock coat, and his party set out for the gray Episcopal church in which he and Mrs. Roosevelt worshipped 20 years ago when the President was in Wilson's little cabinet.

There was a serene, quiet air about the group as they emerged from three cars that took them to the church. A crowd of 300 gathered before the entrance, clapped but didn't cheer, out of respect for the day and the place.

The Roosevelt party is halfway down the aisle on the left side. It held the President, his wife, his daughter-in-law, Mrs. James Roosevelt, his granddaughter, Kate Roosevelt, and his secretary of commerce, Harry Hopkins, a recent widower, and Hopkins' small daughter, Diana. Hopkins and Diana were Christmas guests at the White House.

In front of the President sat his two tall slender sons, James and Franklin Jr.

They looked on a church, brave with Christmas finery: Dozens of burning candles on the altar, and many pots of poinsettias outlining the choir. They heard the melodious St. Cecilia mass, and then took holy communion.

Between the mass and the communion, the Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson, D. D., stressed the same theme the President had stressed the twilight before in his Christmas message to the nation: That peace on earth will come only from men of good will, such good will that it begins with the individual and spreads to nations.

The clergyman touched delicately on the European situation by saying, "To sidetrack war is not necessarily peace." And further, he said, "to tolerate injustice is not peace."

Favors Break

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Senator King, Democrat, Utah, proposed today that the United States sever diplomatic relations with Germany and then break off commercial ties with the Nazis.

He will support a policy that would curtail all commercial relations, he said. "Adolf Hitler can survive only as long as his government has commercial relations with other nations."

Of all the major events that took place in 1932, probably few were more clearly foreshadowed in advance than the gains made by Republican candidates in the November elections.

The Institute of Public Opinion made continuous tests of American political sentiment, and as early as March, eight months before the voting, reported that the GOP would have gained about 85 additional seats in Congress if the elections had been held at that time.

The significance of this forecast was borne out on election day, when the Republicans actually picked up 83 extra seats.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—(AP)—The Commerce Department reported today that income payments of Americans during the first 11 months of this year lagged behind those of the like period last year, but that they picked up in November at the "most pronounced" rate of the current recovery trend.

When the United States government chose to give Germany one of the bluntest diplomatic messages and rebukes since the World War, it was Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles who met Hitler's charge d'affaires in Washington last week and verbally decried Nazi policies, at the same time curtly refusing to apologize for Secretary Ickes' lambasting of the Nazis. Because of Sumner Welles' superb handling of the diplomatic mission, he stands out as the man of the week.

Sumner Welles, an impeccably groomed 46-year-old career diplomat is guiding the United States through the troubled international situation during absence of his chief, Secretary of State Hull, who is attending the eighth Pan-American conference at Lima, Peru. He was given the title of acting secretary during the period although he nominally holds the post of undersecretary. As chief of the department, last week he sternly rejected a German protest against a speech by Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes criticizing the Nazi regime and bluntly told Hitler's government that it should put its own house in order before rebuking others.

Behind his smooth oratory are many years of following the diplomatic game. Welles was born into an aristocratic and wealthy family in New York city, studied at fashionable Groton prep school, and then Harvard. He early expressed preference for Latin-American posts and long dreamed of a Pan-American union which now is materializing in Lima.

Tall, slightly bald and speaking with a slight Groton and Harvard accent similar to President Roosevelt's, Welles' ambition reportedly is to become United States senator from Maryland where he now owns a large estate at Oxon Hill, a Washington suburb. As senator, Welles' friends say, he would seek the chairmanship of the influential senate foreign relations committee. He often is pointed out as an outstanding example of the career diplomat. He was 18 when he decided to enter the foreign service. He proceeded to travel extensively in Spain and South America. In 1915 he entered the foreign service, and his first assignment, despite his experience, was as a secretary in the American post office in Tokyo.

Two years later he was assigned to Buenos Aires and remained there during the trying World War days.

His assignment as a diplomat in South America attracted the attention of his superiors and in 1920 he was made chief of Latin American affairs in the State Department. He was then only 28 years old. After two years he resigned from foreign service, but at the end of a few months he accepted appointment as minister to the Dominican Republic to represent the United States in the imbroglio of financial and political affairs raging there.

Welles discharged his difficult duties satisfactorily and in 1925 he left the foreign service again, this time to write a book "The Dominican Republic." Following Roosevelt's election in 1932, Welles was recalled from private life and appointed assistant secretary of state. He was sent to Cuba in 1933 as ambassador to the revolution-torn country.

Throughout the hectic days of Machado, of de Cespedes and of Mendieta, Welles represented the American government, playing a most significant role in Cuban affairs. Welles has called that period "the most exciting of my life." He was cursed, shot at and harassed in effigy on numerous occasions by Cubans.

Angered because of America's interest in situation when Cuban affairs had become somewhat more stable, Welles returned to Washington and became once more assistant secretary of state. In 1936 after an interdepartmental tiff between Welles and J. Walton Moore, senior assistant secretary, over the post of undersecretary, the situation was solved by the creation of the post of counselor to the State Department. Moore was named counselor and Welles undersecretary.

Welles' chief interest is his work in the State Department. He lives his job. If this were not the case, he says, he would resign.

At California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, Jones has filed applications for patents for a device which would be the heat generated by compression of air—the heat that water jackets are supplied to withdraw—is utilized to give additional power to the compressing unit, thereby not only withdrawing the accumulating heat without outside cooling, but making that heat provide part of the compressing "drive" and thus reduce the amount of power required in the compressing.

The fundamental result of the principle is that what ordinarily would be the heat generated by compression of air—the heat that water jackets are supplied to withdraw—is utilized to give additional power to the compressing unit, thereby not only withdrawing the accumulating heat without outside cooling, but making that heat provide part of the compressing "drive" and thus reduce the amount of power required in the compressing.

Outward quiet prevailed generally through the holiday with pickets aligned outside the zone under martial law.

MEDICINE

Cancer

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Organized medicine has set out to teach the public that the cause of cancer may lurk in about 40 innocent appearing chemicals and even in over-exposure of the body to light, heat and other forms of radiation.

An exhibit at the forthcoming Golden Gate Exposition, opening February 18, will list these substances as well as the generally recognized danger signs of the disease.

Representatives of the California Medical Association, sponsoring the exhibit said they would go into details about which physicians often have been reticent because of ethical considerations. They said they would meet all questions with "non-evasive answers."

Most of the chemicals listed are derivatives or impurities of coal tar and some types of paraffin (not the kind ordinarily used by American housewives).

The coal tar products are used to make aniline dyes, aromatic substances and other articles coming into increasing use with the advance of chemistry into industry.

Still another exhibit will show how this chemical advance has developed an "industrial cancer" hazard.

This comparatively recent discovery involves the sterols, mysteriously potent substances found in the coal tar derivatives and in living tissues as well. The sterols are distant relatives of alcohol but are not understood as yet.

One division of the sterols produces sex hormones, which govern the degree of masculinity or femininity in an individual. Still another division of these substances was found to produce the appearance of cancer, when applied to animals.

Following up clues like these, researchers found cancer in workers handling sterol containing substances. Because this hazard occurred only in certain highly specialized trades, the result was categorically termed "industrial cancer."

The medical exhibit will warn the public against excessive doses of strong light and heat, such as in sun bathing or overexposure to any form of lamp rays, and against repeated contact with radium substances.

Danger signs of cancer will be stressed. The public will be admonished to suspect wart-like formations which begin to grow; raised black "moles," lumps on the breast; sores in the mouth which fail to heal after two weeks, and unaccountable bleeding from any natural opening in the body.

The cancer specialists said they would teach that chronic irritation, injury and infection could help to give cancer a start, but they added:

"Contrary to popular belief, these alone will probably never cause cancer."

CHRISTMAS

Yule Tragedy

ELYRIA, Ohio, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Two little girls received more presents today than they ever dreamed of—but there was little merriment in their Christmas.

It was gone with the shotgun slugs of a rural "Santa Claus" who killed their jobless father and seriously wounded their mother while, he said, they were taking a Christmas tree from his farm.

More than 30 presents—dolls, buggy, toy sewing machine, sweets—showered in upon Sarah and Geraldine Rousseau, 8 and 11 years old, at the home of their grandmother, Mrs. Sarah Dahm. Neighbors and friends shared with them. There were anonymous gifts of cash.

But tomorrow their father, William Rousseau, 37, will be buried and today their mother, 29, had blood a transfusion at the hospital—as the result of trying to provide a Christmas tree and a few trimmings.

William Case, 84, known as "Santa Claus" to the children of his neighborhood because of his long white beard and his kindness, had a sad Christmas, too—sorrowful that his shots struck the couple.

His son-in-law and neighbor, Charles Hale, provided $1,000 bond on the manslaughter charge and took the old man from jail to spend Christmas at the Hale home.

Scientists have found altogether 35 different species of fossil penicillins, types that lived long ago.

Sellout Crowd of 50,000 Assured for Sugar Bowl Struggle

SCALPERS WANT $30 FOR TICKETS ON 40-YARD LINE

Carnegie Tech Is Sure of Victory If Jack Lee Can Play.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 25.—(UP)—Scalpers asked premium prices tonight for tickets to the Sugar Bowl battle January 2 between the Horned Frogs of Texas Christian University and the trick team of Carnegie Tech.

There was a "sold out" sign over the Midwinter Sports Association's door, insuring an attendance of 50,000 in Tulane University's stadium a week from Monday. Only tickets available to the "grudge" battle between the boys from the steel town and the lads from Texas' wide open spaces were those in the hands of scalpers. And the scalpers asked a pretty price for their wares.

"Thirty bucks for a ticket on the 40-yard line," was the offer and all inquirers could take it hurriedly or leave it.

The Tech boys came to town last night from Bay St. Louis, Miss., to celebrate Christmas. They were guests of Joe David, member of the Midwinter Sports Association. All they asked of Santa Claus was to have Jack Lee, 200-pound sparkplug fullback, in the lineup against T. C. U.

Coach Bill Kern, recovering from a slight attack of gripe, was the most cheerful of Tech crowd. A week of practicing on the St. Stanislaus College at Bay St. Louis gave him high hopes that Lee's injured knee, hurt when Tech beat Pitt in the biggest upset of the season, would be healed in time for the Sugar Bowl classic.

With Lee in, the Tech boys considered the game as well as won. Even with 171-pound Tony Laposki substituting for him, the boys from Pittsburgh held no fears for the Texans, for Laposki is a tricky and versatile back.

This week Kern will give his men the works in scrimmage, singling out the toughest of his lightweights to meet the Horned Frogs.

Tech, which boasts no gridiron giants, wanted the match with T. C. U. for a test of eastern prowess against southwestern football.

The Texans wanted the match with Tech for the same reason. Coach Leo (Dutch) Meyer, of T. C. U., pronounced himself satisfied as he heaped Christmas greetings upon his players in Fort Worth before they scattered to their homes for the week end. He promised them two stiff defensive workouts next week with plenty of "head-bumping" by way of final preparation for the joust with Tech.

New Orleans, ever a city of big conventions and joyous crowds, hit its holiday stride to care for the football fans a week hence. Hotel men, all their rooms reserved weeks ago, asked residences for rooms to accommodate the gridiron visitors.

Texas Christian or Carnegie Tech to win? Either one, was New Orleans' answer for the Sugar Bowl classic will be just the crowning holiday blowout to this city of celebrations.

Orange Bowl Could Sell 40,000 Tickets.

By H. A. ARONSTAM.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 25.—(UP)—Sudden graduation of the Orange Bowl to "major league" status confronted the ticket committee tonight with the new but vexing problem of what to do about all who want to see the January 2 football clash here between Tennessee and Oklahoma.

After six lean years, the Orange Bowl mushroomed almost overnight when the two unbeaten giants of Southeastern conference and Big Six football accepted invitations to play here.

And with nine days remaining before the game, the committee found that 25,000 of the 29,000 tickets available already had been sold and requests for more were pouring in at a clip that by January 2 would fill a stadium with 40,000 seats.

But it appeared tonight that the committee wouldn't be able to do anything about it, for a temporary stand with 5,000 seats and extra field boxes already have been added.

The situation was a far cry from Miami Bowl games in the past, when the deficit was in patronage and not in available seats. The largest crowd ever attracted to the Orange Bowl, which started humbly in 1933, was 18,000 for the last renewal.

SUN BOWL TEAMS WEARY AND SICK

EL PASO, Texas, Dec. 25.—(UP)—Utah and New Mexico University coaches faced a serious problem last night in keeping their teams in condition for the Sun Bowl football game here January 2.

For Coach Ike Armstrong, veteran of 14 straight seasons at Utah, it was a matter of working the travel legs off the squad of 27 players that defeated the University of Hawaii, 14-13, in Honolulu December 17. He will have but five days to do it. The team disembarks at Los Angeles Monday, will work out in Phoenix Tuesday, and will arrive here Wednesday morning.

Ted Shipkey, New Mexico mentor, dug deep into his medicine chest to conquer influenza that took three of his men out of daily practice. The ailing players, all reserves, were Wilbur Lewis, halfback; Floyd Darrow, guard, and Ed Lerner, center.

In addition, Bill Dwyer, the team's best back, was still favoring a wrenched knee that kept him out of half the regular season. Shipkey announced that Dwyer will not be in the opening lineup. But undoubtedly he will see action.

Dr. and Mrs. Bucknell's Visit Here Recalls Recent Birthday Party

By Sally Forth.

THE arrival here from Clearwater, Fla., of those popular former Atlantans, Dr. and Mrs. Howard Bucknell, reminds Sally Forth to tell you of the birthday party given Mrs. Bucknell recently by John E. Barbour at the Carouel Yacht Club in Clearwater. Dr. and Mrs. Bucknell are spending the holidays with their lifelong friend, Mrs. Robert C. Alston, of Andrews drive, their presence here inspiring numerous informal gatherings of their friends, for no members of Atlanta society were ever more beloved.

Mr. Barbour's party was a surprise dinner, with the guests greeting Mrs. Bucknell with the song, "Happy Birthday." Dinner was served at a beautifully appointed U-shaped table adorned with long yellow baskets filled with brilliant red and white roses. Matching lighted tapers cast a soft light over the scene. The honor guest's place was marked by a cluster of orchids.

At the conclusion of dinner, Mrs. Bucknell was presented a huge Jack Horner pie containing gifts from all the guests. Much amusement was furnished by the reading of original jingles which accompanied each gift. After dinner bridge was played. A distinguished guest at the dinner was Hugh R. Wilson, United States ambassador to Germany, who was in Clearwater for a rest following his recent recall from Europe.

A DELIGHTFUL holiday custom which bids to become permanent was the inter-club contest for the best decorated doorway and staged by members of the Planters' Garden Club, of which Mrs. Alex King Jr. is president.

The first prize awarded for the most artistic doorway was won by Mrs. Thomas H. Daniel Jr. for the attractive arrangement at the Tuxedo road home. A garland of laurel leaves centered the door and the entire frame of the door was adorned with greenery.

The doorway of Mrs. Alex King's home on Peachtree road was given second place, while that of Mrs. R. G. McAliley on Peachtree Battle avenue was presented third place. The homes of Mrs. King and Mrs. McAliley are among the most attractive in the city and their yuletide decorations added further beauty to the residences.

The doorway of the King home was trimmed with clusters of cedar tied with red ribbon. Mrs. McAliley chose a variety of yuletide decorations for her doorway arrangement with silver and red bells centering a wreath of cedar tied with a red satin bow. Garlands of hemlock and white pine, and purple and slate berries added a colorful note to the decorations as did red rosettes of cellophane.

Judges for the contest were representatives from three other garden clubs of the city, including Mrs. Arthur Tufts, Mrs. Eugene Harrington and Mrs. Hines Roberts.

SENTIMENT of an unusual degree marked the bridge party given last Friday by Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Partridge at their home on Oakdale road. On that same date, December 23, thirty years ago a young belle named Ailee Goggans, of Newberry, S. C., married a young man named E. R. Partridge and they came to Atlanta to reside.

During the thirty years of their married life they have gained many devoted friends here and when they entertained a group of these friends on Friday it was in celebration of their wedding date.

It was appropriate that Lois, lovely young daughter of the hosts, assisted in entertaining. She made a charming picture wearing her mother's wedding gown of white satin, fashioned with a deep lace yoke and embroidered in pearls. Lois also wore the pearl brooch which her father gave her mother at their marriage thirty years ago.

Mrs. Partridge is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Goggans, of Newberry, S. C., and in addition to her daughter, Lois, she is the mother of two sons, E. R. and John J. Partridge. The lovely matron was crowned for her anniversary dinner in aquamarine crepe worn with a gold sequin bolero jacket.

A GROUP of Atlanta belles and beaux is anticipating a novel motor to Griffin to attend the party at which Virginia Cheatham and Richter Smith will entertain. The affair, which takes place at the Club Everree, will be among the first pre-New Year celebrations, and will feature the music of a popular dance orchestra.

Clever invitations in rhyme have been issued to 400 members of the college set throughout the state, and a gala evening has been planned for their enjoyment.

Both the young hosts are popular students at the University of Georgia, in Athens, and a number of their Atlanta classmates at the university have been invited to the party, including Elizabeth Groves, Lydia Holliday and Gladys Lantz.

Virginia is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Cheatham and belongs to the Phi Mu sorority. Richter is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richter Smith, of Concord, and is a member of the Chi Phi fraternity.

SOCIETY turns its attention toward the New Year celebrations with the approach of the forthcoming week end. Among affairs planned for New Year's Day is the appetizer party at which Mr. and Mrs. William A. Ward will entertain at the Piedmont Driving Club from 5 to 7 o'clock in the afternoon. The occasion will assemble a number of friends of the hosts, who are listed among society's most popular young married couples.

Mr. and Mrs. Ward's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Partlow, of Nashville, Tenn., are guests of the Wards during the holidays and they will be among the visitors attending the New Year party at which their son and daughter will entertain.

during the succeeding years. This evening these young girls who have formed themselves into a club will give a party. The girls include Georgia Rauschenberg, Martha Bialock, Anna Lane, Alice Johnson and Harriett Zahner. They have been close friends since school days at E. Rivers school and are now students at North Fulton High school.

This evening's party takes place at the home of Martha Bialock and the young hostesses have kept their invitation list a secret for each one has invited only one couple in addition to her own personal escort. No name has been selected for the club, but according to members, they will choose an appropriate cognomen at an early date.

GLIMPSED at the Christmas ball given by Girls' Cotillion Club at the Piedmont Driving Club: Flora Wright, of London, England, attempting to say "Merry Christmas" to each swain breaking in for a dance before another admirer stepped up to trip the light fantastic with the popular visitor. . . . Aline Talbot, of Daytona, Beach, Fla., the guest of her cousin, Joyce Smith, wearing a striking model of black net trimmed in gold sequins and being welcomed by her many Atlanta friends. . . . Emmakate Vreiman depicting the holiday spirit in her exciting looking gown of red satin. . . . Dorothy Charbonnet, of New Orleans, who is visiting the Jim Henry was glimpsed through a circle of admiring beaux wearing a beautiful model of blue satin. . . . Rachel Burton presenting a picture of beauty wearing her hair piled high on top of her head. . . . Dick Smith and Flossie Gerline happily singing a duet. . . . Mrs. Rufus King entering the club wearing a stunning white fox jacket over a Christmas blue satin dress.

Gattis—Payne.

Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Broadway announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Frances Cornelia Gattis, to William Franklin Payne. The marriage was quietly solemnized on December 2 at the home of Dr. Louis D. Newton on Oakdale road.

Mr. and Mrs. Payne are residing at 925 Argonne avenue.

Miss Hazel Stewart Weds Mr. Adams

WHITE PLAINS, Ga., Dec. 25. Miss Hazel Horton Stewart became the bride of Gene Higgins Adams at a ceremony performed by Rev. Ellis A. Cottrell at 10 o'clock Saturday morning at the home of the bride's family. The ceremony was attended by members of the immediate families of the bride and groom.

The bride wore a wine-colored traveling costume with matching accessories. She wore a shoulder bouquet of Tailsman roses and lilies of the valley.

The bride is the eldest daughter of Arthur T. Stewart, proprietor of Elm Grove Dairy and Stock Farm, and Mrs. Temperance Jernigan Stewart. Her maternal grandfather was the late A. C. Jernigan, of Powelton. She is a graduate of G. S. C. W. with a degree of bachelor of science in home economics. She has taught in the Atlanta schools and as head of the department of home economics in the school at Tignall.

The groom is the second son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Adams, of Tignall. E. W. Adams represented Wilkes county in the Georgia legislature in 1927-1929. He attended the state university in Athens and is now engaged in mercantile business with his father.

After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Adams left for a trip to Florida. Upon their return they will reside in Tignall.

Miss Heath Weds Charles Harris.

J. H. Heath announces the marriage of his daughter, Verdie Louise, to Charles Harris, the ceremony having taken place in Heflin, Ala.

Mrs. Harris was educated at the University of Georgia and for several years has taught in this city.

Mr. Harris, a native of Kentucky, has for a number of years been engaged in the lumber business in the southern states, and for the past three years he has lived in Atlanta.

After June Mr. and Mrs. Harris will make their home in Clayton, where Mr. Harris is secretary and treasurer of the Clayton Lumber Company.

Miss Edna Rufty And Lloyd Schoen Honored at Parties

Miss Edna Rufty, popular bride-elect, and her fiancé, Lloyd Schoen, whose marriage will be an important social event of this morning, were honored during the week end at two parties climaxing the series of social affairs given in their honor since their engagement was announced.

On Saturday evening the couple was honored at the dinner party given by Miss Mimi O'Bierne at the home of her parents on Wesley avenue.

The table was covered with a lace cloth and was centered with a wedding cake topped with love birds. On either side of the centerpiece were graduated arrangements of burning tapers arranged to form an aisle and which carried out the bridal motif. A gaily colored Christmas tree laden with presents for the guests adorned the buffet.

Assisting Miss O'Bierne in entertaining the guests were her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. N. O'Bierne. Last evening Miss Rufty and Mr. Schoen were central figures at the Christmas party given by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Crane Jr. at their home on Brookhaven drive.

Colorful decorations were used throughout the home and adding to the festive background was a gaily decorated tree. Assisting the hosts in entertaining were Mesdames C. C. Schoen, Carroll Schoen Jr., Robert G. Brown and Miss Virginia Pairo.

The marriage of Miss Dorothy Ragsdale to Elmore M. Griffith was quietly solemnized yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the study of the First Baptist church. Dr. Ellis A. Fuller officiated in the presence of members of the family and close friends of the bride and groom.

Miss Virginia Nobel was maid of honor and only attendant. She was gowned in a gray wool suit trimmed with caracul fur and worn with black accessories. Her shoulder bouquet was of gardenias. Fred A. Ridenhour was best man.

The bride was attired in a blue wool suit trimmed with blue fox fur. Brown accessories and a shoulder bouquet of gardenias completed her costume.

After the ceremony the bridal couple left for a trip to North Carolina and upon their return they will reside in this city.

Protect Your Face Now From Winter's Winds

By Lillian Mae.

Is your face beginning to feel harsh and dry? Perhaps it is outdoor exposure—or perhaps it is the result of the artificial indoor heat which is absorbing the natural oils—or it might be the change from indoors to outdoors without proper facial protection. Of course you know that dryness makes anybody's skin look wrinkled, drawn and old. And with the proper treatment it is so easy to retain or restore lubrication and moisture to your skin and thus keep it looking fresh and young.

After you have thoroughly cleansed and toned your face and neck, apply a small amount of a protective cream which contains oils and special ingredients to lubricate and moisten. It will keep your complexion looking young and pliable. Your makeup will go on over it beautifully and will stay on much better. In addition to being an invisible screen, protecting skin from winds and harsh weather, it is a perfect foundation.

Another tip for winter complexion is to use a cream rouge. I can tell you of a very good one—particularly good for dry skin. Applied right after the cream mentioned above, it will blend beautifully and easily and will keep your cheeks rosy indefinitely with a very soft and natural looking glow.

Please me for the name of this excellent protective foundation cream and cream rouge. I'll tell you also where you may purchase it. If you do not live in Atlanta, write me, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Streamlining Handicaps Santa

By Ida Jean Kain.

At 12 o'clock last night we were waiting to interview Santa Claus and the first thing you know he walked right in the front door.

"Why didn't you come down the chimney like you're supposed to?" we demanded.

"Bah!" Santa Claus snorted. "Haven't come down a chimney for years. Not since they streamlined 'em!"

"You've been putting on a little weight, haven't you?"

"Why—uh—why, no! Of course not! That's not fat, that's muscle. My father was a big man—I'm stockily built."

Well, I didn't expect that of Santa Claus. It's too much like the average man!

"But you do believe in calories, don't you, Santa?"

"So now it's calories! Always some new-fangled idea. My grandfather never heard of a calorie and he lived to be 109. Besides, in a job like this a man's got to eat to keep up his strength."

"That's true," I agreed. "You have just about the biggest job going. But, Santa, if you'd eat your protective..."

"I get everything! Mrs. Claus is a fine cook."

"What do you usually have?"

"Why, a regular Christmas dinner, of course!" So it's Christmas every day at his house! Well, that settles some questions! He gets about 5,000 calories a day and then his reindeer get all the exercise.

"Besides," he broke into these musings, "it doesn't make any difference in my weight. Weighed the same for years."

And how much might that be? But that was another unwelcome question and Santa Claus disregarded it. He zipped his pack closed and looked at his watch. "Can't fool around here any longer. Got to be over at the Joneses in 10 minutes." And as he went out the door I heard him grumble: "Calories—fiddlesticks."

So I didn't get to first base streamlining Santa Claus. Like the average man, he is bent on taking his avoidpouls lightly.

On a holiday you have plenty of time to send for this "Man Size Reducing Menu." Enclose a stamped return envelope with your request. Address requests to Miss Kain, care The Atlanta Constitution.

House Looks Fresh, and Well Kept

By Elizabeth McRae Boykin.

WELCOMED GIFTS. The Lady Next Door has had the loveliest Christmas—she's radiant on all scores and you know it just passing by the house. She's improvised a pair of tall candles flanking the doorway and garlanded them with ropes of greenery. Then above the door an illuminated star that's lovely at night.

Little Stair Steps. It was the first Christmas in years that she had a chance to enjoy the festivities herself. Because she's had her hands full with three babies that were stair-steps, then a depressed and recessed budget. Now all at once the children are big enough to mind their manners, and her husband has come out of the woods in his business. And nobody's sick! So it was a real celebration.

She called me in to take a look at the house, with her gifts all in place.

"Just what I wanted," she said, "but I may as well admit that I helped select it—Tom couldn't risk it's not being right."

It was a new rug in broadecated design in tones of beige and buff—the kind that looks so delicate but actually never shows anything.

She has a new pair of lamps—beauties—they are with white alaster column bases and shades covered with gold paper.

For the House. "My parents sent them to me," explained the l-n-d, "but of course, they knew what would go in this room and I'd told them I wanted something for the house."

The walls of the living room are in a soft light green with white woodwork. The curtains are ecru with draperies of flowered cretonne on an ecru ground and repeating the light green in their foliage (the draperies are new—and washable). The sofa is covered in a soft light wood brown, and one easy chair is in an ombre striped green. Two old chairs have new slip covers in the flowered cretonne, and she has made a pair of cushions for the brown sofa in this same flowered material.

The tone of the material on the sofa is repeated in the natural waxed finish of the walnut furniture.

"Oh, but it's grand to have things looking fresh and well-kept again," beamed my neighbor.

My Day: Christmas Day Always Brings A Sense of Peace

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON—I arrived this morning on the midnight train from New York city. As soon as I had breakfast, I went upstairs to see the one grandchild who is already in the house. He was having his bath and looked as contented and cheerful as a baby should look. I picked him up and even then he did not complain, which, considering the fact that I had metal buttons on my dress that must have been cold and uncomfortable, showed a pretty good disposition.

The first thing my husband said to me was: "Franklin III is the grandest baby I ever saw," so it is plain to see that this youngster has already made a place for himself.

The other children arrive today, Sara and Kate from New York city, Diana Hopkins from the over from her home, and all the parents. We will just be a family party for Jimmy's birthday dinner tonight, and afterwards there are some groups coming to sing Christmas carols under the parties.

I also love very much that we will be able to dress our own family tree on the second floor tonight. My husband is going to begin this morning reading the Dickens' Christmas carol to the children, but he informed me this morning that he has a cold in the head, and if he does not feel he is a safe companion, he will have to wait another day.

In yesterday's paper I saw that Mayor LaGuardia, of New York city, had expressed concern and pity for the man who attacked him on the steps of the city hall the other day. That was very characteristic of someone with real understanding. The poor unfortunate who lost their WPA jobs and can find no others, and even those who are on WPA at this season, are to be pitied when they feel that the rest of the world is celebrating and they have to return to a cheerless home and to sad and disappointed children.

I am glad to note that everywhere people are trying to think of these underprivileged children. I am especially proud of the voluntary work which has been done by some of our young NYA people who have worked many unpaid hours reconditioning toys and helping people with municipal celebrations which can be enjoyed by all.

As I drove to the station last night in New York city, I thought again how lovely our modern electric lighting can make Christmas in the city. There were trees in front of both churches on Tenth and Eleventh streets and at the entrance to Washington Square. Many individual houses had small lighted trees or candles in the windows. It made the city seem a friendlier place, as it should at Christmas time.

This is my last chance to say to all my readers: May your Christmas be a merry one and bring you peace and joy!

Wife Holds The Pocketbook And Wields The Whip Handle

By Caroline Chaffield.

Dear Miss Chaffield:

I am one of the husbands who lay their weekly envelope in the wife's lap, keeping out 50 cents or a dollar for tobacco. Believe me, it isn't a sensible thing to do. I suppose having the money makes her feel that she has the whip handle and she tries to lay the whip on my back. My work throws me in contact with a great many people of different classes and since I am naturally friendly, person I enjoy these contacts and make the most of them. Frequently I stop after office hours to pass the time of day with friends, dropping by to drink a bottle of beer with somebody (I am not a drinking man, never had too much in my life) and every time I do it she accuses me of seeing some dame, which is ridiculous. She wants me to work and run home to her. I think a man should have a certain amount of pleasure and at least one night to himself. So far I haven't been bold enough to take the whole evening. Things are none too pleasant between us right now and I'm feeling how you have helped others to straighten out their matrimonial tangles, I'm appealing to you to help us at the beginning of a New Year. C. W.

Answer: Brother, according to my notion a man is entitled to any amount of innocent pleasure he wants; entitled to one evening a week, or two if he wants them. But if his wife is on her job he finds his pleasure with her and nine times out of 10 he doesn't want the "evening off!" Now that's hard on the wife, I know. And where there's a family of babies and a slim purse it takes super-human effort on her part to fill the bill. Yet, if she starts out right and follows through as she began, she can continue to be her husband's pal and playmate on to the end of the journey.

Why don't you begin the New Year by ditching the old outfit for a big evening? Pick out a good restaurant, an amusing show and wind up for a late bite to eat where there's music, laughter and gaiety. You'll be surprised how she'll come up under influence of the bright lights and the beau, dancing attendance.

When you have her in a good mood you can get down to the business of making a new design for your life together. First sketch a budget, see how much she needs for the house and herself, give her that amount with a little surplus pin money and quit the foolishness of laying your pay envelope in her lap. It takes a level-headed woman to handle all the money while her husband keeps out only enough change for a sack of tobacco and a bottle of beer. It's funny the way the feel of the long green in the fingers makes man or woman independent.

Second: you should know (if you don't believe it try it) that a woman can be calmed out of a suspicious, ugly attitude to her husband by being assured that he loves her. You are, no doubt, behind on your love-making, your affectionate pats, your pretty compliments. Then give her the walk daily when you're in kind and never peep about your being a trifle late coming home in the evening. She's scared of the imaginary dames she's conjured up as you are scared of her and when her fears are eased, you will find yours are, too.

Third: she should know (if she doesn't you can tell her) that any woman can make her husband afraid of her, afraid to the point that he will lie about where he's been and go home and to her when he wants to be out. But if she's done that she's also made him hate her. When he's in this frame of mind she's lost everything for there's scant satisfaction in sitting across the room from a scowling, sullen, silent man who's mad with his wife and disgusted with himself.

It's just that simple to straighten out a matrimonial tangle when there's not a triangle or a mess of in-laws or a dirth of money or too much alcohol involved. Luck to you, brother.

CAROLINE CHAFFIELD.

Training Should Involve Gradually Rising Program

By Dr. William Brady.

During the rapid growth and development from the age of 10 to 18 years the heart, like other muscles, is susceptible to strain. Intelligent people understand this and deal accordingly with growing children. But parents of high school boys are frequently either ignorant or negligent or wish-washy in character, for they offer no objection, even ask no opinion or advice from the family physician, when the sporting agents of the town invade the school, coolly trust the qualified physical instructors and choose, coach and train the boys they deem likely material for the football team. This schoolboy imitation of the university man's game gives the less wholesome element a prestige in the eyes of the youngsters which is supervening and educationally The process of training, or "getting wind," involves gradual increase in the capability of the heart which pumps blood to the lungs. In order to excel as a runner, a wrestler, a boxer, a football player, an oarsman or in any athletic competition it is essential that one have an enlarged heart with normally widened reserve power for the heart must perform far more than its normal physiological work during severe exertion.

"Getting second wind" is chiefly a question of the heart's reserve power. During sustained exertion the heart first dilates or becomes over-filled and the breathlessness or air-hunger manifests itself first as anxiety and then as distress; at this stage (perhaps the third quarter in a mile run) the reserve power of the heart begins to be effective, and the increased volume of blood pumped to the straining muscles brings the oxygen they demand. The dilatation is overcome and the athlete experiences sudden relief from the agony of breathlessness. The diaphragm and belly muscles function more freely and the breathing is amplified.

Defensive Bids Confined To Two Groups

By Harold Sharpsteen.

OVERCALLS LIMIT BIDS. Problems of defensive bidding will be simplified for both defending bidder and partner, when once it is realized that all defensive bids are confined to two selective groups.

The point of division between these two classifications of bids is three honor-tricks.

With hands containing a biddable suit, but less than three honor-tricks, defending bidder resorts to a suit overcall.

STRENGTH-SHOWING BIDS. When hands contain three honor-tricks or better, suit overcalls are abandoned in favor of strength-showing defensive bids as the takeout double . . . notrump overcall . . . an overcall in the same suit named by opener.

Simple suit overcalls are definitely limited bids.

2-1-2 PLUS MINIMUM. Simple overcalls may be made, if at the one-odd level, on as little as 1-1-2 honor-tricks and a biddable four-card suit . . . at the two-odd level with two honor-tricks and a five-card biddable suit . . . at the level of three, with a six-card suit and two honor-tricks.

The maximum honor-trick strength in any case is 2-1-2 plus honor-tricks; otherwise defending bidder would not employ a suit overcall. It takes approximately six honor-tricks in combined hands to make any game contract.

PARTNER IS WARNED. Under the circumstances, therefore, partner of defending bidder is warned by the overcall to be extremely cautious with raises and suit takeouts because the overcall is based on limited high-card strength. Defending bidder is doing his best to interfere with a hand containing 2-1-2 honor-tricks maximum.

TRICK-TAKING VALUES. As a rule, the actual trick-taking value of a one-odd overcall is four tricks, not vulnerable, five when vulnerable. A two-odd overcall indicates five playing-tricks, not vulnerable, six vulnerable. A three-odd defensive bid usually shows a maximum of six winners.

If defending bidder makes his contract, it will be only because he is able to snare three supporting tricks out of his partner's hand.

Of Interest to Women

Q. How may a large quantity of butter be creamed easily and quickly?

A. Put it through a potato-ricer.

Q. What are the best sources of calcium in the diet?

A. Milk, cheese, leafy vegetables, and molasses, sorghum, and sugarcane syrup.

Q. When should wedding announcements be sent out?

A. The day of the ceremony, but not until after the ceremony has been performed.

Q. How far should a normal healthy person walk daily when that is the only physical exercise taken?

A. From three to five miles. The arms should swing freely, the body should be held erect and the shoulders back.

cle lesion (myocarditis, fatty degeneration, etc.), or a narrowing of the coronary artery which supplies the heart muscle with blood, is handicapped with respect to ordinary mild activity as is the untrained or insufficiently trained athlete. A grueling contest of endurance and effort.

Dr. Osler, referring to dilatation of the heart, said that impaired nutrition of the heart-walls may lead to a diminution of the resisting power so that dilatation readily occurs. The great medical teacher mentioned several causes of impaired nutrition of the heart muscle, notably the toxins of evers, anemias, arteriosclerosis. Once more I, O' Doc Brady, suggest that in most cases of weak heart benefit is derived from supplementing the diet with a generous daily ration of Vitamin B complex, and I believe this never does harm in any circumstance.

It is a popular notion that one with any kind of heart trouble must avoid all exercise. This is wrong in most cases. Graduated exercises, under the supervision of the physician, is the best way to develop reserve power when the heart is crippled by disease. The physician must prescribe such therapeutic exercise to suit the individual requirements, just as the physician prescribes any medicine or diet or rest he considers best for the patient's present condition.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Myopia.

Neither my husband nor I wear glasses. Our children, 13 and 15, both require glasses. The oculist says they are both nearsighted and will become worse until they are through growing. Is it possible that something is lacking in their food? Each takes a full quart of milk a day, plenty of fresh fruit, eggs, vegetables, etc. (Mrs. A. S. P.)

Answer—No, there is no reason to suppose diet has any relation to nearsightedness. It is too long an eyeball, in a head too long from front to back, the typical Teutonic head. The process usually is arrested between the 20th and 30th years. Less close work done with the eyes, of course, under effects of drops, are advisable, even if no change of glasses is necessary.

The black duvetyne ensemble that is worn here by Jean Rogers, film actress, offers something novel in trimming. On each side of the collar is an applique floral design in deep turquoise blue suede. The plain jacket of the two-piece costume is in the new finger-tip length, has a zipper-fastener instead of buttons, and is topped by a high, soft neckline. The muff held by Miss Rogers is of black duvetyne, its ends trimmed by wide bands of black lynx. The accessories are of turquoise suede.

Actress Jean Rogers Wears Black Duvetyne Ensemble

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 25.—Jean Rogers, blonde Twentieth Century-Fox actress, recently purchased a black duvetyne ensemble that is brightened with an interesting idea. On each side of the collar is an applique floral design in deep turquoise blue suede. The costume itself is a two-piece affair, the plain jacket in the new finger-tip length, and zippers to a high, soft neckline. The accompanying deep muff is of black duvetyne with two enormous bands of fine black lynx trimming the ends. Miss Rogers' draped beret, bag and gloves are of turquoise suede.

Loretta Young likes black for evening wear. A picturesque heavy Lyons velvet gown features a demure, scalloped neck, tiny waist, full skirt worn over a hooped petticoat, and elbow "mitts" of net with which Loretta ties up her hair.

An interesting "original" that went with Gladys Swarthout on her concert tour is a Valentina "resort" model of woven pink wool crepe. The skirt is sectional, alternating pale beige with rose color. A rose sweater tucks into the skirt, and the short jacket has long sleeves and buttons covered in the beige material. Pink glass beads make a novel choker necklace. The slippers are of tan leather and have built-up cork soles.

Irene Dunne, at a recent concert, caused envious gasps from the other females because of her black satin gown with finely pleated skirt topped by a bodice of gold sequins. Black platform sandals, a gold sequin triangle-shaped evening purse, a collarless three-quarter black fox coat with deep sleeves and topaz earrings and bracelets were the rest of the fetching "get-up."

Ann Southern cocktailing in a sports suit designed for her by Bernard Newman. The skirt—with inverted front and back pleat—and the short box jacket were in brown wool striped with turquoise blue. Her blouse, also in turquoise, was of jersey. Brown alligator sports pumps and square bag completed the costume.

Miss Harriett Callaway Keeps Open House for College Set

Among the loveliest of the gay Christmas parties was the open house at which Miss Harriett Callaway entertained yesterday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Callaway, on Woodward way. The affair assembled several hundred members of the sub-deb and college contingents between the hours of 5 and 7 o'clock. Miss Callaway, who is a junior at Washington Seminary, is one of the most popular and attractive members of the schoolgirl set.

The hostess received her guests in the living room of the home, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion in the Yuletide motif of red, green and silver. Between the end windows of the room stood a graceful Christmas tree, its branches strung with myriads of red and silver ornaments. Festooning the mantel was a garland of hemlock, tied at each end with enormous red satin bows and caught with clusters of silver bells. The tables and consoles were adorned with silver bowls filled with poinsettia.

In the dining room, the beautifully appointed table presented an attractive snow scene in miniature, which was centered with an oblong blue mirror simulating a lake. Surrounding the lake were snow-covered banks studded with miniature snow-laden trees, and featuring the scene was a silver sleigh, drawn by silver reindeer in which was seated a jovial Santa Claus figure. Arising from the center of the lake was a graceful crystal tree. At either end of the table were crystal punch bowls embedded in mounds of brilliantly tinted fruits.

Miss Callaway received her guests wearing a becoming gown of cerulean blue net, the full graceful skirt sprinkled with silver sequins.

Assisting in entertaining were the members of the Gypsy Club, of which the hostess belongs, the group including Misses Ione Mercer, Claire Johnson, Susan Garrett, Laura Palmer, Alice Johnson, Catherine Tift, Dorothy Giddings and Cato Wheelchel.

Water for the christening was brought from an ancient spring at the homestead of young Ronald's great-great-grandfather, Rev. William B. Miller.

SANTA CLAUS PAYS VISIT TO PRISONERS

Turkey and 'Fixins' Are Served in All Jails for Christmas.

"Twas Christmas Day in the workhouse..." This line from the old refrain did not have the sad portent usually associated with such ballads for inmates of the Decatur street jail, the stockade and Fulton tower on Christmas Day.

For the spirit of Santa Claus, in the persons of H. H. Gibson, superintendent of the stockade, and Deputy Sheriff Bill Turner, of Fulton county, permeated the grimy bastions on Christmas Day, manifesting itself in the meals prepared for the prisoners in the respective institutions.

Superintendent Gibson said the menu for city prisoners featured a succulent Brunswick stew. Stew of this nature has been served in the past, he added, but the Christmas Day variation was one long to be remembered.

Sheriff Turner, culinary expert of the county and official larder wielder at all official gatherings, assembled a pair of meals that would have struck a responsive chord in the hearts of all gourmands.

For breakfast, prisoners at the tower had scrambled eggs, pork sausage and hot biscuits. This served as an appetizer for the noon-day dinner which consisted of barbecued rabbit, green peas, candied yams, baker's bread, cake, apples, oranges, candy and milk.

State prisoners at Taitnall likewise shared in the general festive spirit of the occasion with an honest-to-goodness turkey dinner as the principal meal of the day, served at noon.

For breakfast they received cereal and cream, eggs, bacon and coffee. Added to the turkey were the traditional trimmings of sage dressing, rice and gravy, fresh green vegetables and banana cake. Last night they "topped off" with sliced bologna, creamed potatoes, lima beans, jelly cake and coffee. It was rumored that a few Christmas "extras" were added to the menu at the Atlanta federal penitentiary but in the absence of Warden Joseph W. Sanford, other officials declined to comment.

Sugar in Cotton Bags to Help Growers

This photograph needs no description. The Louisiana sugar cane growers are displaying and urging adoption of a specially woven cotton bag for their produce in place of imported jute bags. They estimate that the American sugar industry would require 250,000 bales of cotton a year if jute importations stop. The American Farm Bureau Federation is interested in the idea.

Christmas Gifts Taken by Thieves

Sam Crane, of 1522 Stewart avenue, didn't have quite as merry a Christmas as he had planned.

In addition the housebreakers made away with clothing, jewelry and guns valued at about the same amount. It was the second time in six months that he has been "cleaned out," he told county police.

State's First National Lawmakers Found Trip Like an Expedition

1789 Wasn't Even 'Horse and Buggy Days'—Legislators Had No Assurance of Arriving Before Adjournment of Congress Sine Die.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—When Georgia's congressional delegation of 12 returns to Washington for the opening of the first session of the 76th congress on January 3, in steam trains, airplanes or even buses, they might hark back to the rigors of travel which confronted the states' two senators, and three representatives, as they traveled by stage coach—and at times ferried or walked—to the first congress which convened at New York city in 1789.

Legislators of those early times did not even enjoy the advantages of President Roosevelt's "horse and buggy" days, for when they started from points of civilization in the "Cracker State," they were not over sure they would reach their destination before the session of the congress adjourned sine die. When the first session opened in New York on March 4, 1789, Georgia should have been represented by Senators William Few and James Gunn, and three representatives, Abraham Baldwin, James Jackson and George W. Matthews. But while the Honorable Mr. Gunn was delayed by the hazards of travel until the following April 20. The three representatives continued to struggle into the metropolis from the second week after the congress convened until many days later.

Five States Represented.
The "Congressional Record" was the chief of the "Annals of Congress," which in its coverage of the first congress was very brief, due to the absence of shorthand reporting. It relates that only Georgia, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Massachusetts and New Hampshire were represented in the senate when it first met. So difficult did other members find it to reach New York because of all impassable roads, unimproved swamps and the mosquito-infested lowlands of New Jersey, that a quorum of that body was not obtained until Senator Richard Henry Lee, of Virginia, finally found his way to New York on April 6, 1789—the upper chamber then proceeded to its first business of counting the vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

Casting votes for General Washington, Georgia joined a majority of the states in electing him the first President, with John Adams, Vice President.

On April 7, the day after a senate quorum had been obtained, Senator Few, along with Senators Ellsworth, of Connecticut; Paterson, of New Jersey; MacLay, of Pennsylvania; Strong, of Massachusetts; Lee, of Virginia; Bassett, of Delaware, and Wingate, of New Hampshire, were appointed a committee to bring in a bill for organizing the judiciary. Two days later, Senator Few was chosen one of a committee to make arrangements for receiving President Washington.

The committee reported that "Mr. Osgood, the proprietor of the house lately occupied by the President of congress; be requested to put the same, and the furniture thereof, in proper condition for the residence and use of the President of the United States, and otherwise, at the expense of the United States, to provide for his temporary accommodation."

Senator Few was also one of a committee appointed to consider and report a mode of carrying into execution the second paragraph of the third section of the first article of the constitution, which reads in part: "Immediately after they shall be assembled in consequence of the first election, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes. The seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year, and of the third class at the expiration of the sixth year, so that one-third may be chosen every second year."

Few a Marylander.
Mr. Few, both a delegate and senator from Georgia, was born near Baltimore, Md., June 8, 1748, moved with his parents to Orange county, S. C., in 1758; studied law

Atlanta Newspaperman Who 'Cleaned Up' New York Returns After His Retirement as 'Big City' Executive

Joseph Johnson, Once Constitution Reporter, Will Spend Winter Here.

By LEE ROGERS.

You've heard of those people whom the crowd instinctively follows.

Joseph Johnson is one of them. Quite by accident this Atlanta newspaperman discovered his natural knack of showmanship. And once New York discovered Joseph Johnson it lifted him into politics and heaped honors upon him after making him an "official" parade organizer.

He became commissioner of public works of the borough of Manhattan, fire commissioner of New York, a member of Tammany Hall's council of war, chairman of the New York boxing commission, director of publicity for the Red Cross during the war, and many other things similar.

Retired From Politics.

Joseph Johnson started life in modest circumstances and today he is modest in discussing his accomplishments. He prefers to live away from the crowd now that he has retired from politics and has come back to Atlanta to spend the winter in his native Georgia.

After working his way through the University of Alabama, Johnson came to Atlanta where the late Clark Howell, a good friend of his father's, offered him a job on The Constitution.

Johnson, Bob Adamson and several other Atlanta newspapermen went to New York around the turn of the century to work for Hearst's Journal. That was during the time when Richard Croker was running Tammany Hall and running it in a manner that was repulsive to Johnson and his born and bred Democrats from Georgia.

These newspapermen, under the direction of Johnson, called a meeting and mapped plans for doing something to remedy the corruption. They founded the "Order of the Acorns."

"Being newspapermen and using the catchline that 'mighty trees from little acorns grow' we attracted attention from the beginning," Johnson narrated. "Our city editor looked on amusedly."

Johnson and his Order of the Acorns promoted the first luncheon meeting ever held in New York city when they rented a vacant store to hold a political meeting. It was at this meeting Johnson discovered his knack at attracting and holding crowds. He figured that if once you got the crowd in the building, they would stay to hear what was to be said. He attracted them with music and they stayed to the speaking.

Mark Twain became interested in the Acorns. He wrote Johnson and the latter took the first train to the writer's home. With his endorsement the Order of the Acorns were riding high and attracting much publicity. Yes, the Acorn candidates, with the help of the independents, won the election.

It was then that Joe Johnson staged his first big parade—the parade that precluded many great ones to follow, including the one given for Bobby Jones when he returned from England in 1930 the grand slam champion of golf. That parade was second only to the one staged for Lindbergh, Johnson said.

The Order of the Acorns were sailing high, wide and handsome, but strangely enough, all returned to their newspaper jobs and none, at that time, accepted political jobs.

Returning to work feeling pretty proud of himself, Mr. Johnson said he was greeted by Hearst with the curt, "You back again?" That's all the boss ever said about the Acorns.

Disaster overtook the Acorns two years later and Tammany regained its power. The Acorns were then no more.

Join Forces.

When Charles F. Murphy assumed control of Tammany, the affairs of the organization were conducted in a manner that met the approval of the Georgia Democrats and they joined forces.

It was shortly after this Johnson became fire commissioner. Under his direction, the New York fire department was motorized. For a showman like Johnson, raising the money for the equipment was easy. He arranged a fire engine exhibit in front of the city hall. The popular liked the new equipment so well that the city was forced to hand out the necessary money.

Red Cross Publicity.

During the war, the Red Cross drafted Johnson to handle its publicity. People were not conscious of the work these people were doing. He got up a big parade which featured the nurses in uniform marching down Fifth avenue for eight hours, ending with a big rally in Madison Square Garden.

President Wilson became interested in this movement and the following year asked Johnson to stage another Red Cross parade, which he witnessed.

Though he makes no claims to fame as a performer, Johnson once attempted to establish a combination bar and soda fountain where the average man could walk in, buy a drink of whiskey or a soda without the stigma of entering a

Joseph Johnson, formerly of Griffin and Atlanta, who went to New York and became a Tammany Hall leader, commissioner of public works, fire commissioner and boxing commissioner.

bar. It was to have no back room for women.

When the establishment was nearing completion, an Episcopal minister came over and told Johnson his "bar" was within 200 feet of his church.

"I asked him if there wasn't someone to whom I could appeal his decision. He told me I could go to Bishop Potter, who then ruled the Episcopal church with an iron hand. I told the bishop of my desire to promote temperance, to establish a place where men could have a social drink and do so in refined surroundings."

"The bishop asked me, 'You mean to tell me that man said you couldn't do that? Why I've been trying to get such a place established for a long time. I do not believe in this hypocrisy.' I asked him if he meant I could go ahead."

"Why certainly, go ahead, and what's more, I'll come down and patronize you myself."

Prayed at Bar.

"I asked him if he would come down for the opening. He agreed not only to come down to the opening but to pray at the bar. You can imagine the front page headlines this attracted—and being young, I thought this publicity would help business. But it only attracted the curious and when high society women rubbed elbows with truck drivers it meant we only stayed open about six months."

"My newspaper friends would never believe that getting the Bishop down to the Subway Tavern wasn't a publicity stunt and the greatest of its time."

When boxing was legalized in New York but was still in dispute, Governor Al Smith appointed Johnson chairman of the state boxing commission, chiefly in an effort to keep the Dempsey-Carpenter fight out of New York, Johnson explained. This was the state's first boxing commission.

During this time, Johnson was closely associated with Charlie Murphy, the Tammany leader, whom he described as a mild, retiring man who could do things himself but was not the figure that commanded the crowd. The Georgian served chiefly in a publicity connection on the "war council of Tammany" because he had the knack of attracting the people. He prepared all newspaper advertising and parades for Tammany Hall.

Works Commissioner.

He was appointed commissioner of public works, a job which he held until 1930, when he retired. He could have been reappointed for another four-year term had he desired it.

As public works commissioner, Johnson directed the installation of the elevated highways, the widening of the downtown streets by narrowing the sidewalks and chopping off buildings at the sidewalk line instead of permitting them to extend over the walks.

But the long time in public life had taken a certain toll. Johnson wanted peace and to return to his native Georgia. He still claims his residence in New York, but each year he is spending the winters in Atlanta.
